This company has been formed for the purpose of supplying the public direct with Agricultural Implements and Machinery of the most approved construction, at manufacturers' fixed prices.

With an ample capital the active co-operation of the leading manufacturers—a special organization for the purpose—and the possession of the best situated and most extensive premises in London, the Company now offer to the Australian public the following important and exclusive advantages:—

The power of selecting from the manufactures of ALL the leading makers.

The certainty of having only first-class goods supplied, at manufacturers' prices.

The option of having the goods delivered at the principal colonial seaports, free of all risk to the purchaser, and at a charge included in price; thereby securing the goods to colonial purchasers at a cost very little exceeding that incurred by British farmers.

The opportunity of procuring supplies of all other goods through the Company's agency, on the best terms, and in many cases free of any charge for freight or other expenses.

The facility of making remittances in colonial produce, and receiving the proceeds in goods or cash.

The utmost promptitude, regularity, and care in the execution of orders or commissions.

And reliable information and advice as to all recent improvements and requirements of particular districts and operations.

The fact of the directors having been chosen from the leading manufacturing firms will afford an invaluable guarantee of the quality, workmanship, and fitness for its use of every article sold, and for the faithful fulfilment of the above pledges.

The catalogues of the Company are published in English, French, German, and other languages; and a special Illustrated Priced Colonial Catalogue will be forwarded, post free, upon application.

No Australian agriculturist or shipper should leave England without an inspection of the Company's stock.

Mr. ESKELL, surgeon-dentist, member of the College of Dentistry, England, may be consulted daily at 21, Hunter-street, between George-street and Pitt-street. On Sunday from 10 till 2.

MR. LOUIS ESKELL, has just received from one of the firm in England, the Vulcanite Coral Suction Palates, which have received her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent. Can be had at 21, Hunter-street, Sydney.

TEN POUNDS FOR A SET OF TEETH complete.—Mr. L. ESKELL, Surgeon Dentist, 21, Hunter-street, is enabled to supply teeth upon the new vulcanite system, without wires, or other unsightly fastenings. They are perfectly incorrodible, will never change colour or decay. Their resemblance to the human teeth is inimitable. Upon this new principle, neither teeth nor stumps are extracted, or the slightest pain given whatever.

FROM TRIFLING CAUSES GREAT EVENTS OFT SPRING.—In this refined age—in all stages of life, in every grade of society—a good state of the mouth is of the greatest importance. The loss of the teeth not only destroys the contour of the features, but is highly detrimental to health. When the teeth are lost, it is impossible properly to make use of solid food; and if the stomach is loaded with pieces which have not been masticated, the patient is exposed to the most distressing indigestion; the stomach loses its power of contraction, and becomes weaker and weaker, as it no longer digests. Besides this effect upon the general health, the vacancies occasioned by the missing teeth cause those remaining to become loose, or to approximate too closely to each other, the features to be drawn from their original position, and the countenance to be wholly distorted. To remedy this, recourse should be had, with as little delay as possible, to the dentist, who (supposing him to be skilled in his profession), besides attending to the mouth, will supply ARTIFICIAL TEETH, upon such unerring principles as to defy detection; and the pleasing gratification is experienced of seeing the features restored to that uniformity so essentially necessary to youth and beauty, an agreeable appearance, and "though last not least," answering satisfactorily for all the purposes of mastication and articulation.

Mr. ESKELL, Resident Surgeon Dentist (member of the College of Dentists of England), 21, Hunter-street, Sydney.

Throughout the land the cry is widely heard;
In every town an eager band up springs,
The battle-spirit in each breast is stirred.
One common feeling every man incites.
With sturdy purpose, here to make a stand;
With steady arm and stern unfailing heart,
To fight for this, our rich and sunny land.
One only trouble seems to meet our course—
One evil seems on each of us to press—
Though arms and courage in excess are met,
The public evil seems to be—the dress.
How shall the uniforms for such a host be found?
Whose great resources meet the sudden call?
Where best of style and moderate price combined,
To please the taste and suit the purse of all?
Such is the outcry from the country round;
We all are ready, but the dress we need.
Behold, then, where your troubles all may end—
H. COHEN proves to all a friend indeed!
The MONSTER HALL throws wide its friendly gates,
The noble army all can be supplied;
The country save some thousands of expense,
And volunteers be handsomely supplied.
Whatever style of costume you may need,
H. COHEN'S MONSTER HALL soon now supply:
Fine gold-slashed uniforms, or plain suits, neat,
Designed to wear, as well as please the eye.
Remember, then, all who would save their cash,
And be equipped in highest style of art—
The largest stock—the best in all the land—
Is at H. COHEN'S MONSTER MART.

To STOREKEEPERS, SHIPPERS, and RESIDENTS IN THE INTERIOR.

UNDER THE DISTINGUISHED PATRONAGE OF HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR, and the PUBLIC of the Australian Colonies.
WILLIAM JENNINGS, Cutler, Surgical Instrument Maker, &c., George-street, opposite Jamison-street, Sydney, has much pleasure in again tendering his sincere thanks to a discerning public, for the liberal support he has received for so many years, and trusts by a constant attention to their wishes, combined with punctuality, to merit a continuance of that encouragement hitherto bestowed. He would, therefore, now beg to VOLUNTEER
his services to those ladies and gentlemen requiring Cutlery, and to say that he has now ready a splendid selection of
of the very best make, balance handled, of the most exquisite finish, and highest polish; their great durability, and the care taken in their manufacture, have so established their claim on the public patronage as to render the name of
JENNING'S CUTLERY
second to none, and the extensive sale of which is a very flattering, as well as substantial of the appreciation in which they are held by the public of the Australian Colonies.
TESTIMONIAL
GENTLEMEN
are respectfully invited to inspect his stock of RAZORS. W. J. would wish to avoid saying all that could be said in their recommendation, lest it might appear exaggeration, and although he has not yet arrived at that perfection in their manufacture as would enable him to guarantee their SHADOW WOULD SHAVE!
nevertheless he can safely defy competition, and has much encouragement in believing that his labours of the past years in the production of JENNINGS' OWN RAZORS,
have been fully appreciated. They are lancet-edged, hollow ground, and plated polish. Also, every variety of knives, both office and pocket, &c., highest finish, and great reduction in price. Rogers' and Mappin's knives always on hand.
Razors ground and set daily, as usual, and made ready for use on the shortest notice. Ladies' SCISSORS ground and set on a new principle, and made equal to new.
TO THE LADIES.
W. J. would politely bow, and beg to solicit a continuance of that liberal patronage which he has experienced since last he had the honour, and indeed the pleasure of addressing them in reference to his splendid stock of LADIES' CUTLERY,
of every description imaginable, as a visit to his establishment would prove. Scissors of every kind, dressing case cutlery, pen and pocket knives, some of which are highly ornamental, as well as useful, the whole of which can be recommended as combining durability, latest improvements, and best finish.
THE MEDICAL PROFESSION, are respectfully invited to inspect a well assorted selection of SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS
from the best houses in Europe, combining all the latest improvements, and W. J. begs to add that he has spared no exertion in this most important branch of his business to obtain such a selection as the gentlemen of the profession may have no difficulty in providing for their wants; and no expense has been spared to obtain those of the very best make. To enumerate a few, there are Surgeons' Pocket Cases, Clendon's Tooth Forceps, Common ditto, Children's ditto, Veterinary Surgeons' ditto, Set Splinths, Hollow Arm ditto, Flat ditto, Electro-plated MIDWIFERY FORCEPS, Artificial Legs and Arms, Spinal Stays, Elastic Stockings for swelled legs, varicose or enlarged veins, Spring Crutches, Abdominal Belts, &c., and every contrivance to relieve the invalid and wounded, all of which will be found to be in the best and most modern style. Ladies addressing a note to Mrs. JENNINGS will command her immediate attention.
Old trusses recovered, and alterations made in the most careful manner, and all such orders will ensure prompt attention.
SELF-ADJUSTING CHEST EXPANDER.
The attention of parents and guardians are respectfully invited to the above, for to those to whom the care of children is confided, W. J. need hardly say, "prevention is better than cure. Nevertheless, when there are so many painful instances of deformity, which a little care and attention, and the application of the
would have entirely prevented, W. J. may be excused for saying that no person should delay one moment in providing themselves with the means, so ready at hand, to effectually prevent the evils which so often arise from the want of a proper expansion of the chest in the young. Independently of physical evils, they are serviceable in preventing those inelegant figures we sometimes meet, and in many cases arising from bad nursing, and which the application of the EXPANDER in youth will be sure to correct. They are of great durability, can be worn either inside or outside the underclothing, and have given great satisfaction in all cases of their application.

The machinery of this mill is of the most recent construction, embraces all the latest improvements, and has been erected regardless of expense. By a careful selection of the best oats obtainable, he trusts to produce oatmeal as much superior in quality and flavour to that hitherto supplied for colonial consumption as colonial oats confessedly are to those imported from Europe or elsewhere.
The manufacture will comprise three descriptions of meal: namely, round, medium, and fine, which will be prepared in such packages as may be found best adapted to meet the requirements of the trade.
Arrangements have been made with Mr. W. LAWRANCE, 43½, William-street, for the introduction and sale of the manufactured article, and all orders transmitted to him will receive prompt attention.

Volunteers.—A meeting of the original members of the New South Wales Volunteer Artillery was held yesterday afternoon, at the office of Captain Mann, Ordnance Stores, George-street. The gentlemen present numbered fourteen. Captain Mann having been called to the chair, Mr. Dymock proposed that the members of the New South Wales Volunteer Artillery, should form a company in the artillery corps now in course of organisation. Mr. Corcoran seconded the motion. Mr. Bligh objected strongly to the resolution, since the corps now forming was not authorised to do so. In answer to a question, the chairman said he was aware that the Government had offered to find arms and accoutrements to volunteers, and to allow them a certain sum for clothing. He explained further that he did not think the other gentlemen who were forming themselves into a company were open to censure, since any gentleman might form a company of artillery. As to his own position he scarcely could be said to belong to any company, being the commandant of the Volunteer Artillery of New South Wales, which might consist of one or more battalions. Mr. Dymock then proposed, and Mr. Kebble seconded, that at the forthcoming general meeting the following resolution should be be submitted, namely, "That the members of this corps should, without delay, form itself into companies, and that each company should have power to frame its own bye-laws and regulations for the guidance of its members." Carried. A conversation then ensued as to the desirability of Captain Mann's resignation of his office of Commandant, in order that he, like other gentlemen, might begin again de novo. But although Captain Mann stated he was perfectly willing to do so, and to join as a gunner, the meeting decided that he ought to retain his position. Mr. Rowan Ronald informed the members that he had heard, on good authority, that Major Wingate had resigned his appointment, but he (Mr. Ronald), had stated to the committee of the Sydney Volunteers, that he could not resign his office without the assent of the Commandant. The Sydney Volunteers, he also said, started on the understanding that they would receive no pecuniary aid from the Government. After some further desultory conversation, the meeting broke up at half-past five.

The Judicial Establishment of Queensland.—The entire duties of the Supreme Court, in the colony of Queensland, are now discharged by one judge, who exercises civil, criminal, equitable, ecclesiastical and insolvency jurisdiction, and from whose decisions there is no appeal. A committee appointed to enquire into the working of the judicial establishment, have just brought up their report. They recommend the appointment of a Chief Justice at £1500, and two Puisne Judges at £1200 each; the establishment of District Courts and a Court of Appeal; the appointment of two Crown Prosecutors to accompany the Judges on Circuit, Sheriffs and bailiffs for the several District Courts in which Police Magistrates are to act as registrars, and to file all pleadings, &c. The report is based upon a lengthy evidence taken by the committee in reference to the general administration of justice in the colony.

The Bishop of Brisbane.—We have been requested to state that the Bishop of Brisbane will preach to-morrow morning, at Christ Church.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 25, 1860.

The expressions of admiration and confidence which fell from the leading statesmen of England respecting Australian sympathy for New Zealand, will be gratifying to many. Thank Heaven, we have no fellowship with the sort of people to whom honourable fame is indifferent, and who turn from the well deserved confidence of the world as swine would turn from a pearl. We believe that among the secondary influences which prompted these colonies a few years ago to rise as one man against the convict system, was the reproach which it brought upon these rising communities, and the insult to which it exposed all who for a moment quitted them. We have in the oblivion of that epoch an example of the rapidity with which changes are wrought. Unless when the harlequin of the colonies, Mr. Marsh, rises to catch a "guffaw" from the House, no one thinks it worth while to taunt the colonies with their past. The readiness and dignity with which the British Government yielded to the demand of the Australias tended to remove the bitterness of a long and painful conflict. Thus the natural sympathies of the colonists have returned to their wonted channels. Home is the object to which every eye naturally turns, and it is not a mean, but a generous impulse to desire that we may stand upon even terms with the most public spirited and patriotic of our fellow countrymen.

We regret that New South Wales can only claim a small portion of the honour. The cry of danger in New Zealand produced more practical results in Victoria. There, it seems, an offer was made—noticed by the Secretary for the Colonies, one which, perhaps, it would have been wise to have accepted. It would have been highly honourable to the colony had some of those thousands who have no domestic ties to hinder their adventure, and who are capable of rendering service in the hour of need, been enabled to share in the task which has so unexpectedly devolved upon us—the preservation of civilisation in New Zealand.

The present condition of New Zealand is calculated to awaken our sympathies on other grounds. In this colony we have had troubles sufficiently severe, but they sink into insignificance in comparison with those recently described, and which have befallen some of the most deserving colonists who ever quitted the British shores. The work they undertook required resolution and fortitude. They had to reclaim the wilderness—to maintain friendly relations with a half-civilized people—to perform often the most labourous toil in the first stages of colonisation, and to dispense with all those enjoyments and comforts which belong to society in a more advanced and refined condition. Some have spent the most valuable years of life. They enclosed their farms—subjugated them to the plough—adorned them with British vegetation—reared, by years of economy and toil, comfortable dwellings, and gathered about them appliances which reminded them of home. By no fault of theirs—for they are not even accused of oppression or encroachment—by no wilful collision with native rights or pretentions, they are involved in all the miseries of war. Their farms are restored to the wilderness; their fruit trees are cut down; their houses demolished. Everything is marked by that waste and ruin which results from savage violence. Those only who possess some means are able to escape to more fortunate countries. The rest are doomed to privations of the most distressing kind. It requires some reflection to enable any one to realise what results from the presence of an enemy at the outskirts of a town. All industry is stopped. All resources are cut off. The labourer is no longer employed. The inhabitants, crowding in, press upon each other. Persons accustomed even to the privations of bush life sink under new forms of misery. We hear, for instance, that the houses of Taranaki are literally crowded with fugitives; not by families merely, but by tens and scores they are huddled together in narrow dwellings. The mortality of this settlement has increased tenfold. We may easily imagine how alarm and privation and miserable lodgings would weaken the constitution and open the door to disease.

We are by no means satisfied with the part taken by this colony in extending succour to New Zealand. We have despatched a few soldiers, but that is all. Looking, as we do, to metropolitan influence and authority, apathy is as much below our pretensions as it is unsuitable to our duty as Christians and Englishmen. The subscription list which appears daily in our journal is the sole and most inadequate expression of our sympathy. Not £100 have at present been contributed for the support of some eighty women and children who have no other resources than charity while their husbands and fathers are exposed to the perils of war. It seems a hopeless task to attempt to awaken a sense of responsibility where such results only can be realised after an appeal of such a nature.

The fugitive colonists of New Zealand, of course, press heavily upon all who are within their reach. We fear that in the general difficulties of the times many will be without resource. Some steps have been taken to remove the most helpless from the theatre of war, and those settlements more fortunate will doubtless be able to absorb all the dislodged population. It is, however, of vital consequence that the colonisation of New Zealand should not recede. The country is specially adapted for a British population. Conflict with the natives—perhaps at some time or other inevitable—must terminate in their defeat. It is an absolute necessity that there should be no falling back—that wherever we have raised the flag of civilisation we should rally to its support, and maintain it at all cost.

We do not think it is easy to over-estimate the commercial importance of New Zealand. Its progress thus far has been magnificent. But the establishment of a strong colony in that country is the formation of an Australian outpost, which will contribute to the strength and security of the whole colonial group. Instead of withdrawing any part of the inhabitants of New Zealand, we should be glad to see them reinforced. Were a volunteer corps to be formed in the Australian colonies, they would probably become permanent settlers on the return of peace. But England from her volunteers might, doubtless, raise a small army who, if offered land as a recompense, would gladly conquer the country they would afterwards inhabit. Waiving the rights of war, which might entitle the Government to deal with the lands of the insurgents, we are sure that without the smallest injury to the natives of New Zealand, room might be found for thousands and tens of thousands. We do not believe in the absolute and exclusive right of any race to the earth which God has given for the enjoyment of man, and upon the same principle that we would not shut out from our shores any willing to obey our laws, would we insist on the title of our common humanity to the appropriation of the waste places of the earth, despite any theory of nationality.

The temporary abeyance into which the direct Atlantic telegraph has fallen, has stimulated another project, the object of which is to unite the same termini by another route. This plan contemplates joining Scotland to Iceland, Iceland to Greenland, Greenland to Labrador, and Labrador to Nova Scotia, and though the total distance by this detour would be greater, the separate reaches would each be shorter. It is argued that messages would go quicker by this route, in consequence of the breaks; for with submarine cables it is found that six hundred miles is the greatest length that is convenient. Beyond that the retardation is so considerable, that time is saved by repeating the message. The drawbacks to the proposed line are, that the bottom of the sea that has to be traversed is very uneven, and in some places very deep—that the prevalence of icebergs will constantly endanger the cable, and that two land lines in very wintry latitudes are involved, one across Iceland, and one across the top of the Greenland peninsula. The promoters of the line, however, have succeeded in inducing the Government to have the route surveyed, and an official report on its merits or demerits may, therefore, be looked for when the survey is completed. Sir L. M'Clintock has been appointed to the task, in command of the steamship Bulldog. In addition to this official survey of the deep sea portion, the promoters have chartered the screw steamer Fox, the little vessel in which Sir L. M'Clintock made his dashing arctic voyage; and Captain Allan Young has been appointed to the command of it, for the purpose of examining the shore lines of Greenland, Iceland, and the Orkney, Shetland, and Faroe Islands, to ascertain the most suitable spots for landing the cable.

The attention which this project has attracted has drawn forth some remarks from Mr. Saward, the secretary of the unfortunate company. In a letter to the Times, part of which we published on Friday, this gentleman states that the condition of the cable is by no means considered absolutely hopeless. Continuous and patient study has been devoted to the question of its restoration, and the conviction is confirmed, that the failure has arisen from the existence of faults in the cable prior to its submersion—faults which have increased in magnitude since it was laid, but which it is believed do not exist in the deep sea portions. It is hoped that the ends may be picked up for a very considerable distance out to sea, and examined and repaired. An expedition has been started to do this at the American end of the line. Experience has shown that, with care, cables may be recovered from much greater depths than was at one time thought possible, and as the line is not supposed to be broken, but only electrically injured, it may, perhaps, be continuously lifted.

If it can be restored, Mr. Saward maintains that the line can be worked at a remunerative speed, and will be not inferior in that respect to the projected northerly route. The length of the submarine portion, including slack, is only two thousand and fifty miles, he says, and not three thousand, as usually reported; while the distance from London to Valentia is about six hundred more. The Iceland line would be about three thousand seven hundred and seventy-three miles long, and would involve in all about fourteen repeats. And as the different sections of the line would lie in different directions towards the points of the compass, one or other of them would be frequently liable to magnetic disturbances, and the interruption in any link would of course destroy the through communication. He concludes, therefore, that an average of twenty words a minute could not be regularly maintained, and that it would not be able to compete to any great advantage with the old line if that were restored.

He admits that that line was not of the best construction—that it ought to have been of a more costly and substantial character, but he adds that experiments and researches have almost conclusively proved that a proper cable made with all the latest improvements could be laid without difficulty, and would carry twenty words a minute right through. But Government will not come forward to help any new undertaking by taking any part of the risk, and capitalists, who have already sunk half a million in their premature and over-hasty experiment, are shy of risking any more outlay. If they succeed in restoring the cable to working order, they will then get the Government guarantee, however slowly the line may work, as the guarantee is not dependent on that. But if this last effort fails, and the cable should be hopelessly broken in the attempt to lift it, the task of replacing it must be considered as adjourned sine die, until fresh and satisfactory experiments elsewhere shall have sufficiently demonstrated its practicability to tempt a fresh investment. This will certainly be a disheartening termination to what at one time promised to be the grandest achievement of the age. In that case the public hopes would centre exclusively on the new project, which in any case, it is to hoped, may be found practicable. There will be plenty of occupation for two lines, and a duplicate route will be a double security against interruption.

The Red Sea line has been restored to working order again, as will have been seen by the later telegram we were able to give on the arrival of the mail. But the extension to Kurrachee, the benefits of which we had expected to receive long before this, is still out of order. The intended line from Rangoon to Singapore is being very carefully tested prior to its shipment, and will probably be laid down in the course of the year. This will complete another link in the chain. But from a statement we recently noted in the Calcutta Engineer, the overland Indian lines are in a very unsatisfactory state as to the speed with which messages are transmitted across the continent, and that though the Government had been badgered upon the subject, no very considerable improvement had been attained or even promised. An account also appeared lately in our columns, giving the number of interruptions in the course of a year in the overland Java line, and the number was very considerable—tropical storms proving often very destructive both to posts and wire. Recent advices also from Batavia complain that the submarine telegraph between there and Singapore, is almost worthless from its being so much out of order. All these casualties do not promise favourably for our being able to maintain a rapid and constant communication with England by the line projected. In course of time, however, these drawbacks will be overcome, Better lines and additional lines will be laid down, till the communication is perfected. This has now become a necessity, and must be realised, whatever may be the incipient discouragements or failures. It becomes us, however, in the management of our Australian branch to learn by the experience derivable from what is being done elsewhere, and to see that every precaution is taken to secure success. The Tasmanian line is a warning not to be too hasty in laying a cable without a thorough survey of the ground. The examination of Bass' Straits was evidently altogether too superficial, and rocky ridges not discovered till too late have continually chafed the cable, and it now lies in a half-abandoned condition, repairs having been attempted in vain; and the two Governments responsible for it seem both disinclined to spend any more money about it, unless they can have some assurance that additional expenditure will result satisfactorily.

The storm which raged along our coast, a few weeks back, was fortunately not very destructive to marine property. A few small coasters were all the victims. Storms of equal, if not greater fury, appear to have been raging on the coast of England all the past winter, beginning with that in which the ill fated Royal Charter perished, and continuing at intervals down to Whitsuntide. One of the worst seems to have been at its height on Whit Sunday, and it is stated that within a week there were no fewer than three hundred wrecks on the coast of Great Britain, and that the loss of life was proportional.

Storms obey fixed meteorological laws, though those laws are at present but very imperfectly understood. We have frequently drawn attention to the importance of noticing the phenomena which presage a storm, and transmitting the information by means of the telegraph to all the principal ports within range. The Times draws attention to the fact that the storm on Whit Sunday, was distinctly portended for two days before it broke in its fury, and if the intimations had been attended to and proclaimed, much property and life might have been saved. A scientific correspondent of that journal says that the meteorological observers on the outports of Cornwall and the west of Ireland, and other prominent points of the coast, from which the weather could be best observed, could flash all over the kingdoms by means of the Electric Telegraph, intelligence of coming storms. We have in Australia an area far larger than that of the United Kingdoms connected by telegraph, and shall soon have it still further increased, so that from Cape Moreton to Port Adelaide information can be transmitted of storms passing or threatened.

MR. W. FULLAGAR.—At his Yards, Western Road, at 12 o'clock, Fat Cattle.

The Volunteer Movement.—At a preliminary meeting held on Thursday evening, at No. 471, Pitt-street South, it was considered desirable that a company of rifles be formed in the southern portion of the city, to be styled the "South Sydney Volunteer Rifles." It was at the same time resolved that a public meeting be called by advertisement, inviting all persons interested to attend the same.

Woods the Murderer of the Shepherd Morell in the Condamine District.—We learn that Woods, who was indicted for the murder of a shepherd named Gabriel Morell at Mr. Archibald Campbell's station on the Condamine, on the 30th May last, was to be tried on Wednesday last; the criminal sittings at Brisbane having been enlarged until the 23rd instant, to allow of the presence of a material witness for the prosecution, who was detained on the road by the floods.

Re-assembling of Parliament.—It is reported, on what may be considered good authority, that the Legislature will be convened for the despatch of business on the 25th of September.

KIANDRA.

18th August.—The weather has cleared up, and again settled down to fine sunshiny days with slight frosts at night. The snow is fast disappearing from the flats, and large green patches are becoming visible on the hill sides. The river, from the melting of the snow, has risen considerably, but not to such a height as to stop all working. The anticipated flood which was to have swept wheels, dams, cradles, and everything before it, has proved a myth, and very happily so for our miners. People begin to assert, and now with some reason, that we have passed the rubicon of severe weather. I trust they are correct, and, if so, all agree we have been favoured by one of the mildest winters ever known in these Alpine regions.

Escort.—The Government escort left Sydney on the 13th instant, and arrived here by 11 o'clock to-day, bringing £5000 and upwards of notes and specie for the Oriental Bank. Five days from Sydney—when we take into consideration the very bad state of the roads, must be considered very quick work and does great credit to the sergeant in charge.

The Mails.—If we contrast the foregoing with the irregular delivery of the mails—we must say that great blame attaches to the contractors. Last Wednesday, we only received half or the first mail that left Sydney on Tuesday week, and up to this date we hear nothing of Friday week's letters, so that via Goulburn our last dates from Sydney are only to the 7th August! This tells much in favour of a bi-weekly importance.

Mining.—The diggers have worked pretty steadily mail to Kiandra, and we must again urge its vital lately—but the resolution come to by the Chief Commissioner, after getting the opinion of two assessors, viz.:—to stop all ground sluicing on the Surface Hill, until the sluicers have constructed a large dam, in which to collect the tailings—will there is little doubt affect the next escort returns, more particularly as many of them threaten to give up their claims in preference to carrying out the proposed work. M'Donough's claim has been yielding regularly from six to ten ounces and upwards a-day, and if not flooded out, it will yield, to all appearances, a very large amount of gold.

Quartz Reef.—One quartz claim has been granted to the party of Germans mentioned in my last, but its extent and richness remains to be proved.

Copper.—There is no doubt of the existence of copper near here. We have seen several specimens, which are highly impregnated, and bear a large percentage of the ore. Copper mines, however, will not pay here until the cost of transit comes down to nil.

The parties at the Four-mile are doing well, and several very handsome parcels of flat, weighty gold have been brought in this week. We hear nothing further of the monster nugget.

Lob's Hole.—A good many have lately gone to settle at Lob's Hole; report says the prospects there are turning out very well. At Tantangarra the miners are likewise well satisfied.

Another Death.—Alexander Sharpe, a miner, who had been suffering for some weeks, died on the 17th, and was buried to-day. We have now nearly a death to record daily.

Murderous Assault.—A carrier, Charles Milson, of Camden, was walking on the evening of the 13th, at New Providence, when he was attacked by two men from behind, who throttled him and threw him down. Whilst attempting to rob him, he cried out, and his mates coming they decamped. Sergeant Scarlett of the detective force was soon on their track, captured the shorter, named John Brown, alias Jack, but the taller, name unknown, presented a pistol at him, and swore he would fire, and afterwards got away in the scuffle. Sergeant Scarlett brought over John Brown in custody to Kiandra; and on the 17th instant he was examined before J. H. Scott, Esq., J.P., and fully committed to take his trial at the next Cooma Quarter Sessions.

19th.—Weather still very fine. Men pouring in daily by forty and fifty at a time. Goods getting scarce. Pack horses only arriving from Russell's and the Tumut. Oats, 25s. a bushel; flour, £80 to £90 a ton; sheep, 22s. each.

The Queensland Clergy.—The Bishop of Brisbane and his clergy have taken their passage in the Yarra Yarra, to sail on Wednesday next. Arrangements have been made for a special service in Christ Church, Newcastle, on Thursday morning, when as many of the clergy of the diocese of Newcastle as can make it convenient to attend, will meet their new brethren. We understand the Bishop of Brisbane will preach in Christ Church to-morrow morning, and at St. Mark's, Darling Point, in the evening.

Coroner's Inquests.—The City Coroner held an inquest at the Rushcutter's Bay Hotel, on Thursday evening, on the body of an infant named Charlotte Dyer, aged five weeks, the illegitimate offspring of a girl named Mary Dyer. It appeared from the evidence of this girl that she gave birth to the deceased in the Benevolent Asylum—the reputed father of the child, a wheelwright, named Edward Gardiner, a married man and father of a family, living in Harrington-street, having refused to make any provision for herself or infant. The child appeared healthy at birth, but soon afterwards was attacked by the thrush, from which it would seem the sufferer never thoroughly recovered. When the child was a month old, its mother left the Asylum with it, and went to live with a married woman, a shipmate of the girl's, in a tent at Rushcutter's Bay. The child continued to get weaker, and expired on Wednesday night. Dr. Smith examined the body of the deceased after death, and was of opinion, from its appearances, that death resulted from inflammation of the lungs; verdict accordingly. The jury appended the following rider to their verdict: "We consider the conduct of the reputed father highly censurable for not providing the mother with the means to support the infant."—An inquest was held at the dwelling house of Dr. Macnish, at Paddington, yesterday, on the body of Mr. Donald M'Pherson, aged forty-five years. The deceased gentleman came out to the colony many years ago as a police inspector, and held that position up to about eighteen months ago, when he was appointed landing-waiter in the Customs. After his appointment to this post he frequently complained of pains in his head, which appeared to be affected by exposure to the sun. Two months ago he had a serious attack of illness, but soon recovered his ordinary health. After returning from his day's business he often complained of drowsiness, and evinced an inclination to sleep. On Tuesday evening last, after returning home, he told his wife that he felt so drowsy that he could have slept on the road. The next morning he rose at six o'clock, and proceeded toward the city, but when just above the Victoria Barracks he was seized with an epileptic fit, and fell down in the road; in this position he was soon afterwards found by a man named Robert Watt Thompson, who procured assistance, and had him conveyed to the residence of Dr. Macnish. At this time Mr. M'Pherson was quite insensible; but he partially recovered consciousness during the day. As he did not appear to recover from the effects of the fit, Dr. Macnish called Dr. Boyd in consultation, and they agreed as to the treatment to which the sufferer should be subjected; at midnight of Wednesday, Dr. Macnish left the patient in charge of Mrs. M'Pherson, and at five o'clock the next morning he again visited him and found him better; he was then sitting up on a sofa, and was quite sensible; the doctor then left again, but was called back immediately afterward by Mrs. M'Pherson, who stated that she had observed a change come over her husband; on going back into the room the doctor found his patient lying down and insensible; he sighed deeply three times and expired. Dr. Macnish stated, in his evidence at the inquest, that he had no doubt but that the deceased, being of full habit, had died from the effects of an epileptic fit, most probably induced by the nature of his occupation, in which he was much exposed to the rays of the sun, and the gauging of spirits. Verdict: Died from natural causes. The following rider was appended to the verdict:—"We consider the arduous duties which the deceased had to perform in the service of the Government hastened his end." Mr. M'Pherson has left a widow and five children.

Alteration in the Council Chambers.—The enlargement of the parliamentary buildings in Macquarie-street, required to afford additional library accommodation for the members of the two Houses, is in a forward state. The space in the centre of the building which has hitherto been used for the refreshment room, is being adapted for the library; when this is finished, the books will be removed from the present library adjoining the Assembly chamber, which will then be used as a reading-room. The new refreshment-room is being erected immediately at the rear of the new library; the sides of the building, and also the roof, are finished, and an inner skylight of shaded glass is being put up. The length of the refreshment-room is thirty-eight feet, and the width twenty-two feet, exclusively of the bar. It will be entered from a wide passage at the back of the library, connecting the two Chambers, the members of both of which will have convenient access both to the books and to the refreshments. The alterations are being carried on by Mr. Harmer, the contractor this year for the general building works belonging to the Government, and will be finished in time for the reassembling of Parliament at the end of next month. The sum voted last session for these alterations was £3000, but the works will not probably cost that amount.

QUEENSLAND.

[From our Correspondent.]

Brisbane, August 22.—The Assembly met yesterday afternoon, on the expiry of the fortnight's adjournment. Punctual to their promise the Government brought forward the two measures which complete their land policy. The first, which is entitled a bill "To provide for the Alienation of Crown Lands" was introduced by the Colonial Secretary; and the second, intituled a bill "To provide for the leasing of Crown Lands previously occupied," was brought forward by the Colonial Treasurer. Both bills were read a first time and ordered to be read a second time, the first on Tuesday next, the second on Friday next. In introducing the Land Sales Bill the Colonial Secretary said that three months ago the Government had not intended to propose any permanent legislation on the land question during the present session, considering that there would not be time, owing to the pressure of other business, to enter fully on its discussion. But when they found that the public business was in a very advanced stage, and considered that the two land bills which were lately before the house, and on which so much care and attention had been bestowed by honorable members were now nearly perfected, and soon about to become, he hoped, the law of the colony, it was thought desirable that the remaining land measures should also be passed during the present session. This, he thought, could be done without detaining country members an unreasonable time in town. There were many reasons which rendered it highly desirable that the whole land policy of the colony should be settled. Not to mention others, it was very clear that the recent land sales had been injuriously affected by the uncertainty which attached to the future land system. The bill contained special clauses to encourage the growing of cotton, and to authorise the granting of land to emigrants to the extent of the sum paid for their passage. It was founded on the existing Land Act, with such alterations and additions as were considered expedient.

The public of course have had no time or opportunity to form an opinion on these measures, so that it is impossible to say how they may generally be received. It appears to me, however, that the plan of agricultural reserves provided for in the Land Sales Bill is a clumsy contrivance, and likely to work badly in practice.

The following is a summary of the other business disposed of by the Assembly at this sitting:—

Mr. Blakeney presented a petition from William Stanley Hall and George Dickens, immigrants per ship Chaseley, praying that their case might be inquired into and compensation awarded to them in land or otherwise, and further praying that no decision be come to in regard to the petition of Dr. Lang until their petition had been taken into consideration. Mr. Macalister opposed the reception of the petition on the ground that it prayed for compensation either in money or land. The Speaker, having examined the document, ruled that it could not be received.

The following bills were read a third time and passed, viz., the Electoral Lists Collection Abolition Bill, the Primary Education Bill, and the Appropriation Bill for 1860.

A message was received from his Excellency intimating that he had assented to the bill abolishing grants from the revenue in aid of religion. There was at one time some doubt whether this bill might not be reserved for the signification of her Majesty's pleasure thereon; but these doubts are now happily set at rest.

Mr. Macalister gave notice of his intention to move for leave to bring in a bill to alter the law relating to real property.

The House having exhausted the business on the paper, adjourned at an early hour.

It is generally believed that Sir Charles Nicholson is about to resign his office of President of the Legislative Council. It was understood from the first that he would only retain it for a short time. Captain O'Connell is spoken of as his successor. It is said that Sir Charles will intimate his intention to the Council at its sitting to-morrow.

Mr. Trotter, whose tender was accepted for building the new Government House, has refused to enter into a contract, on the ground that he now finds that his tender is too low, and that he could not carry it out but at a sacrifice. In these circumstances, fresh tenders have been called for.

The brig Express, 315 tons, Captain Dalen, has arrived from London, which port she left on the 24th April. When she is sufficiently lightened to get over the bar, she will be brought up to the wharf. The great bulk of the cargo of the Express consists of wine, beer, and spirits.

A public meeting has been held at Ipswich, at which a memorial to his Excellency was agreed to, praying him to recommend the appropriation of a sum of money towards fitting out a prospecting party, under the conduct of Captain Mechosk, late of Victoria, to search for gold. At this meeting Mr. Cooke, of Melbourne, attended, and gave an account of the progress of the gold discovery in Victoria, and its bearing upon the prosperity of that colony.

Captain Morrisset, whose office of Inspector-General of Police was abolished by a vote of the Assembly, and who has fallen back upon his other appointment of Commandant of the Native Police, will shortly proceed to Rockhampton, for the purpose of taking the command of that corps, the head quarters of which has been fixed at the above town.

A few days ago a young child named Caroline Smith, only two years and three months old, met her death under melancholy circumstances. She was playing with her brother, who is about eight or ten years of age, and who was amusing himself with a piece of pine, eighteen inches long, fashioned like a spear, and aiming it at a target suspended from a fence. From this target, according to the evidence, the spear rebounded, and struck the child a little below the ear, fracturing the skull and driving a portion of it in on the brain. Medical assistance was at once procured, but the child died of the injury two days afterwards.

Sir Charles Nicholson delivered a lecture, in the School of Arts, on Monday evening last, choosing for the subject of his address the "Overland Route." The attendance was good, and although the subject is now rather hackneyed the worthy baronet contrived to make it both interesting and instructive from the masterly manner in which he handled it, and from the way in which the progress of the traveller along the route was illustrated by the exhibition of numerous photographs. The lecture embraced not only the overland route but descriptions of Jerusalem, and various places in the Holy Land, Constantinople, Athens, Italy, &c., besides the interesting ruins comprised in a voyage up the Nile. The lecture, as may be supposed, was very well received.

A rather cleverly-executed forgery has recently been detected here, on the Joint Stock Bank. It consists in altering, apparently by chemical and other means, one pound notes into fives. A note which has been so changed is shown at the bank, and the alteration is so cleverly effected as to deceive any person who does not subject it to a minute inspection. Now that the forgery has been detected, and the public put upon their guard, it is likely that the forger's harvest is at an end.

A man named James Cannan was committed for trial at the Brisbane police office, on Saturday, charged with having committed a rape on Maria Byram, a girl under twelve years of age. Circumstances of an atrocious nature, as detailed in the evidence, are connected with this offence. The prisoner was brought up before the Criminal Court on Monday, for trial, but on the application of his counsel his trial was postponed until next criminal sessions, on the ground that he had not had time to prepare his defence.

An inquest was recently held at Toowoomba, touching the death of a man named Thomas Sanderson. It appeared from the evidence that the deceased was ploughing in a paddock adjoining the Queen's Arms Hotel, and that while kneeling down to disentangle the trace, which had got around one of the horse's legs, he received a kick from the animal in the right side, which broke one of his ribs. He was assisted into the hotel, and medical assistance was procured, but he expired two days afterwards from the effects of the blow.

It has been arranged that a public meeting shall take place at Toowoomba in October for the purpose of taking steps to organise an agricultural association.

The criminal sessions of the Supreme Court commenced here on Friday last. The following cases have been disposed of:—

Cecilia Wynn, charged with stealing a silver watch and guard, the property of James Davidson, was found not guilty and discharged.

Jeremiah Harney was indicted for stealing a mare, on the 28th of May, the property of James Fitzgerald. Before the conclusion of the case, the Attorney-General said that he considered it to be his duty to withdraw it, three of the witnesses having contradicted each other on a material point. The jury accordingly, by direction of his Honor, returned a verdict of not guilty.

Kimboo, a Chinaman, was charged with having wickedly and feloniously killed and murdered one Garrick Burns, at the Clifton Station, on the 24th June last. The trial of this case occupied the whole day. The jury had some difficulty in arriving at an unanimous conclusion; but at last, after being locked up about two hours, they came into Court with a verdict of guilty, at the same time strongly recommending the prisoner to mercy. Sentence of death was then passed upon the prisoner in the usual way.

The only other case for trial is that of the man Woods, charged with the murder on the Burnett. This case has been postponed twice already, in consequence of the non-arrival of the medical gentleman who examined the deceased. It will come on this morning if the witness have arrived.

The North Australian says that the supporters of the turf in Queensland have agreed on establishing a Champion stakes of £100 each, together with one thousand guineas added, to be open to all horses in the Australasian colonies, and to be run for over the Ipswich course on the first Wednesday in May, 1861. Weights as follows:—2 years, 7 st.; 3 years, 8 st. 2 lbs.; 4 years, 9 st. 4 lbs; 5 years, 9 st. 11 lbs.; aged, 10 st. Mares and geldings to be allowed 3 lbs. Second horse to receive £200, and the third to save his stakes. To be declared before the 1st February, 1861. The stewards (7), judge, starter, and clerk of the course, to be elected at the general meeting of the North Australian Jockey Club; on which occasion, also, steps will be taken to make such improvements in the course as shall be deemed proper for the occasion. The subscriptions already amount to nearly £800, and from the manner in which the proposition has been received by the public, there can be no doubt that the funds will be sufficient to provide another stake, to be called the "Queensland St. Leger," to be run for at the same meeting.

I mentioned in my last that the weather had cleared up, and am happy to say that it still continues to be very fine. Yesterday a refreshing sea breeze was blowing, which was very reviving for vegetation, and put one in mind of the finest summer days. The grass is springing fast, and feed will soon be abundant if the present favourable weather hold on for a week or two.

There is a decline of £3 in the price of flour; the best Sydney now is selling at £25.

It appears that Mr. Moriarty, who holds the office of Under Colonial Secretary, is shortly to leave the colony for Sydney. Mr. Moriarty is highly esteemed here, where a high opinion is entertained of his official capacity. His departure will be a public loss to Queensland.

From conversations I have had this morning with members of the Assembly and others, I think it likely that the Land Sales Bill will not give satisfaction, and will meet with strong opposition in the Assembly. I am sorry for this, as the Ministers have gone on very well hitherto, and as it would have been a great point for the colony to have had the whole land policy speedily settled. The bill certainly seems crude and ill-considered. However as I inclose a copy, you can judge for yourself.

GOLD NEWS.

Gold from Bungonia.—While all eyes are turned to the Snowy River, and all hearts filled with the wildest anticipations of its riches and favourable effect upon the material prosperity of the district, the fever of excitement is not likely to be abated by the intelligence which we now afford of a probable gold-field in our immediate neighbourhood. On Monday last, a parcel of gold, weighing three ounces, was brought into town by Mr. Armstrong, junior. The gold was exhibited and weighed at the stores of Messrs. W. Lenihan and Co., and was said to be the produce of a week's work of two persons. Yesterday, Mr. George Gains, of Bungonia, brought into town a parcel containing 2¼ ozs. of fine gold, and a nugget weighing 3 ozs. 15 dwts., containing about two ounces of gold, and the rest quartz. These were sold to Messrs. Emanuel and Son. Mr. Gains says he had been at work for a fortnight and three days, with one hired hand. He reports that there are about forty people at the creek, and that all are getting gold, more or less, and that he is determined to go back and stick to work there. The price obtained by Mr. Gains for the nugget was seven pounds; and for the gold which was slightly interspersed with quartz, three pounds eleven shillings per ounce. About twelve or eighteen months ago, Mr. J. R. Styles brought into town, at various times, about two hundred pounds worth of gold, obtained by various parties at the Wash-ed-away-creek.—Goulburn Herald of Wednesday.

The Lambing Flat Gold-fields.—Much excitement at present exists in Bungonia, owing to the recent very encouraging accounts from these diggings. Most of the inhabitants have left for them, all sorts of tradesmen have abandoned their professions and are now in search of the precious metal. Samples have already been brought in for sale. They are extremely rich and beautiful, of a nuggety description; one nugget weighs seven pennyweights. Several who went a week ago only to inspect, have not since returned, but had been allured to remain digging, from the success of the parties then on the field. Late and authentic accounts from parties who came here for picks, cradles, and the other e[illegible] for mining are beyond our most sanguine expectations.—Goulburn Herald.

A LUCKY HAND.

A STOCK-BROKER'S STORY.

I'll tell you the queerest thing that ever happened to me in business. One evening, about twenty years ago, I was going home along the City Road to my own house at Pentonville Hill. It was near the end of December. I had stayed balancing accounts in my office sometime after the Stock Exchange closed. A frosty night, with a half-fog in it, had fallen; and there was a rather valuable pocket-book safely buttoned up in the breast-pocket of my great-coat, for I had that day sold five hundred Western Canal shares, which, in common with all such property, the railways were rapidly bringing down. They belonged to one of my best customers, had been advantageously disposed of, and I was carrying home the bank-notes, thinking my own house was a safer place than the office, as the gentleman had not pleased to mention his banker. The City Road is not a solitary place at 5 p.m. I walked on, summing up the day's transactions and the probabilities of the morrow, looking into the windows of all newsmen and stationers for the evening papers I thought most reliable, and occasionally seeing that my great-coat was securely buttoned.

I was engaged in the latter occupation within sight of that notable inn, the Angel, Islington, when I became conscious of being watched and followed by a man who seemed determined to keep his eye on me. His dress and appearance belonged to the shabby respectable; himself and everything about him looked as if they had seen better days. His figure was tall and thin, his face long and sharp; his hair was perfectly gray, yet I felt convinced that his years did not much exceed my own, and I was then on the sunny-side of fifty. It was strange, too, that he made no attempt at concealing his pursuit of me; indeed, there was nothing sly or cunning-looking about the man. Still, I had my pocket-book to take care of; and as we reached a quieter part of the road skirting the New River Company's Waterworks, I resolved to let him know he was observed, by turning abruptly, and facing him in the full light of a street-lamp.

Had it been any description of womankind, instead of a gray-haired and evidently not well-to-do man, I should have gone home to Mrs. Rugly more puffed up with vanity and self-conceit than that honest woman was accustomed to find me, for the best dressed specimen of beauty and fashion in all Belgravia could not have been greeted with a gaze of greater admiration and delight than that he bestowed on my cane-coloured whiskers and almost carroty hair. Was the man mad, or making game of me? Somehow, he did not look to be either; there was an appearance of perfect earnestness and sincerity in his demonstrations as if his whole heart was in the business, and he neither thought nor cared for anything else.

"Do you do anything in the Stock Exchange, sir?" said he, before I could make up my mind what proceedings to take.

"Yes," said I, astonished out of all my caution. "Why do you ask?"

"Because, sir, I want a little business done in that way. It's not much, but I'll pay you any commission I can;" and he pressed so near that I laid my hand on my breast-buttons. "If you will be so good as to tell me your office, or anywhere else you like to see me, I'll come to-morrow forenoon."

"Here's my address," said I, "I'm always glad to see people in the way of business; in the meantime, I am in haste to get home, and wish you a very good-night."

My steps did not linger after that declaration. The shabby, admiring man might have confederates, and the road was not busy; but when I looked back at the next turn, there he was, standing in the same spot, and gazing after me as if I had been his guardian angel leaving him to himself.

Mrs. Rugly and I had a good laugh over that interview, when we sat by the fire after our boys and girls had gone to bed. I wanted to make her believe he was a countess in disguise; she insisted he was a sharper, and meant to wheedle me out of money or stock. At last we agreed the man must be mad; and I went to the office next morning resolved to let him slip out of my acquaintance as quietly as he had stepped into it. According to my usual custom, I was at my office full three hours before the Exchange opened, but there was the man pacing up and down in front of the premises, and evidently waiting for me. When we had got fairly into the sanctuary of business, alias the small and dingy room which serves gentlemen of my profession in the neighbourhood of Capel Court, he came to the point without giving me time to ask it, by producing a pocket-book with as many marks of better days and hard service as himself, turning it over so as to let me see a very few notes, reading a memorandum for his own instruction, and then requesting me to buy for him three hundred shares in a certain Scotch railway.

The line is now one of the best paying in Britain, but for prudential reasons which one ought to have in speaking of anything Scotch, I will not give its particular designation. It had been commenced in the first fervour of railway-making, when the public mind having awakened to the utility of the iron-road, for which George Stephenson and his supporters had fought so tough a battle, rushed into companies and scrip in every direction, and would have laid down rails between John o' Groats and the Land's End. The line in question was not quite so unpromising, but from local causes, as well as a temporary reaction of the ferment, its scrip was rapidly going down. I was aware that interested parties were doing their best to keep up the shares, and brokers who had none to sell called it a bad speculation. Perhaps I ought to claim credit for conscientiousness beyond the wont of Capel-court men, but my would-be customer looked so hard-up, so earnestly bent on turning his few notes to the best advantage, that I could not help telling him my mind on the subject, and seriously advising him to have nothing to do with the Scotch railway. He heard me with a look of quiet but immovable obstinacy.

'It may be all true, sir; I am sure it is, for I have heard as much from all quarters: but buy the three hundred shares for me—they are down fifty per cent. now. I have got a hundred pounds here, and I'll pay you the rest within a fortnight."

"You'll lose your money," said I; "the line will never pay."

"It will pay, and I won't lose!" said the man, his eye kindling with a fire so bright and wild that it made me think of our conclusions overnight.

"I don't care if I tell you, though some people might think it silly to believe in such things, that I had a dream about that railway, sir. My uncle was a first-rate speculator, a Lancashire man, one of the earliest that came out strong for George Stephenson; you have heard of him, perhaps;" and he named a gentleman well known in the first railway war, but then deceased for some years. "He brought me up, and would have left me his shares in the North-Western, but I displeased him by marrying against his will, and my uncle never forgave anybody. I don't repent that yet; my wife's the best woman in the world, and a prettier face I never saw; but we've been poor, sir, very poor, and nothing has succeeded with me, though I have tried a good many things. When my uncle died, five years ago, he left his shares, bank-stock and all, to a housekeeper he had. It has set up her whole family. I'm told they're Liverpool gentry now; but I had not seen him for seventeen years, till one night last month. I had a dream; it must have been near daybreak. The old man appeared to come into my room, looking as he used to do when we were good friends, and bringing with him a person who I never saw before. 'Tom,' said he, 'this gentleman is a stock-broker; get him to buy you three hundred shares in the —— Railway, and you'll be rich man before seven years.' He said a few more words which don't matter just at present, then walked away; and I woke up so sure of the whole business, that I struck a light and looked round the room for the man he had brought, till poor Sally thought I had lost my judgment. The dream occurred every night for a week after. I got up all the money I could muster, and went over London looking for the stock-broker, but I never saw him till yesterday evening, when I was going home; and, sir, you are the very man my uncle brought with him; I would know your face among twenty thousand, and if you will buy me the shares, it will be better for us both.'

Mrs Rugly, at least, gave me credit for sense and discretion; but the singular story, the fact that he had recognised me, and the man's own faith in his dream, made me give up reasoning against the Scotch railway, and consent to buy the shares. They had another fall that very day; and knowing they were still in the descending line, I bought them in slowly, so that by the end of the week the three hundred shares were secured with little more than the contents of my friend's pocket-book. The man had interested me. You perceive it is possible to interest even a stock-broker; and while buying up the shares, I made some inquiries after his antecedents. There was not a broker in the Exchange who could not tell me something about him, and their accounts confirmed his own—that he had tried a good many things, and succeeded in nothing. There was no speculation—mine, canal, dock, or railway—in which he had not dabbled; and the most popular superstition in Capel Court was, that whatsoever he bought shares in was sure to go to the dogs, except he sold out immediately, when it was equally certain to rise in the market. There were tales of stock-brokers who had made their fortunes, and those of their customers, by the guidance of that curious rule. As the natural consequence of so much ill-luck and determination to speculate, I also heard that he was in the habit of owing and borrowing, and that his funds and his credit were now at a very low ebb. Nobody could imagine where he got the hundred pounds, except from his relations in Lancashire, on a promise to embark for Australia, to which safe distance their united endeavours had not been sufficient to send him and his wife, though employed to that end for the last ten years. Whether fortunately or otherwise, I cannot say, but he had no children; and in spite of his unsuccessful stock-jobbing, the pair were said to live in affectionate harmony, not always found in better supplied homes. Theirs, at the time of my story, was a second floor in Cummin-street, Pentonville. Their name was Raxworth, and there was at once a contrast and a resemblance between them: while he was a tall man, she was a little woman; but both were gray before the time, very thin, and looked as if they were always expecting something.

Faith is infectious. When I bought the shares, delivered them to Mr. Raxworth, and, above all, talked over the matter with Mrs. Rugly, she and I felt so persuaded that something would come of the dream, that we kept our eyes on the Raxworths, took a deep interest in their welfare, and would have been friendly with them, but for an unexpected obstacle. On the evening after I had bought up the last of the shares, and we were settling money matters in the back-room of a neighbouring coffee-house, where Raxworth insisted on treating me to a steak and porter, because I would charge him no commission, one pot followed another, till my friend's eyes began to twinkle, and his words flowed rapidly. He told me all he would do when his fortune was made by —— Railway; of the relations he would cut dead for looking down on him and Sally; of the house he would build overlooking Birkenhead, and to which he would take her home in her own carriage, to spite people who thought little of her for being a dressmaker's girl, though anybody who saw Sally knew she was born to be a lady.

"No doubt of it," said I, my own heart getting warm. "I am sure Mrs. Rugly would like to know her; we'll call on you some day this week."

"No, if you please," said Raxworth, starting back with a blank terror in his look. "I beg your pardon, Mr. Rugly: it would be a great pleasure to my wife and me; in fact, we are too poor acquaintances for you. But don't come, sir, don't come to our house at all. After what the old man said, that might be true as well as the rest of the dream."

"What did the old man say, Mr. Raxworth?" said I, laying down my pot with my whole stock of determination.

"Well, sir, I should have told you before, but I thought you would not buy the shares for me. My uncle, after he had told me about the making of my fortune, and the hand you were to have in it, said a few words more, and they were the strangest of all: 'Take care of him, for he will kill your wife!' Now, sir, I dont believe you would do the like, but it was all in the same dream; that was the last thing my uncle said. Don't come to the house, sir, nor have anything more to do with us!"

Raxworth believed in what he told me, and I did not tell that part of his dream to Mrs. Rugly; but I made him a solemn promise, and took a fixed resolution, to avoid their domicile, which, under one excuse or another, I kept to the letter.

In pursuing this policy, I gradually lost sight of the man of the three hundred shares. I saw him in Capel Court sometimes, occasionally met him going home, heard of him first as an agent for somebody's unadulterated coffee, then as a traveller for a patent pill, and lastly, of his subscribing a pictorial Bible. They had removed from Cummin-street to a humbler lodging in Clerkenwell, and his wife was taking in plain work. To say the truth, I had no wish to see the poor man. In spite of his dream, the —— Railway had gone utterly and totally to the dogs; the most sanguine speculators pronounced it a bad job; its shares were declared to be nowhere at all; and many a time Mrs. Rugly and I lamented over poor Raxworth and his three hundred.

In the cares of one's family, and the ups and downs of one's business, time slips away wonderfully. It was five years after I had bought the said shares; there had been a panic, bad times, a settling down and a clearing up again, when, to the amazement of the whole Stock Exchange, there was a resurrection of the —— Railway. Somebody from Glasgow had taken it in hand. The gentleman had a large capital and rich cousins. The newspapers began to talk of what immense utility the line would be to the northern towns and the agricultural districts, its shares came into the market, and went up every day. Where was Raxworth? I could not make out, till one day he appeared in my office, looking grayer and more shabby than ever, but with the same earnest eyes.

"They're going up, Mr. Rugly!" was his first salutation.

"Yes," said I. "You'll get back your hundred pounds yet."

"Get back my hundred pounds!" he screamed, for his voice had grown strangely cracked and shrill. "I'll make my fortune: didn't the old man say it? Have Sally and I lived poor and pinched, wanting coal in winter, and beer in summer, all these years, only to get back a hundred pounds? No, Mr. Rugly, I won't sell out till they come to cent. per cent. at least."

No arguments could shake that resolution, and I did not try to do it; the matter was beyond my Capel Court experience; but for once Raxworth was not mistaken. The shares went up higher and higher—such a run upon a railway was never known. At length they reached cent. per cent., and then he sent me a brief note to sell out immediately, and buy him six hundred shares in the South-Western. Raxworth had got above my reasoning. Henceforth, I obeyed his mandates without question, and they always came by post. Somehow, whatever he bought, whatever he sold, success and profit attended his speculations. I knew him to net five thousand by one venture that same year, and he doubled it within the next. His luck became as proverbial among the brokers as his want of it had been before. He was now a comparatively rich man. I was aware of his having a considerable deposit in the Bank of England, besides owning railway stock to a still greater amount; yet when I saw him again, Raxworth looked as shabby, as careworn, and as earnest as he had looked when I was going to congratulate him on the prospect of getting back his hundred pounds. He settled with me liberally, promised the continuance of his patronage, told me he had bought the ground for his house overlooking Birkenhead, and that Sally and he would enjoy their money; but he could not understand her, she was growing so strange like, and taking on so many odd ways.

To bring my story to an end, it turned out that the sudden accession to wealth, after such long poverty and frequent disappointment, upset poor Mrs. Raxworth's brain. The strangeness and the odd ways resulted at last in frantic madness, and she died a few years ago in a private asylum. Her husband still lives and speculates; his capital is now immense, though he has not always won at the same rate. His house has been built, and is let, for he never inhabited it, nor set up his carriage. I can see no change in his appearance from the day he came to tell me "they were going up." Once, after a long reckoning, he asked me if the old man had not spoken true in his dream. "Only," said he, we did not understand it right about Sally; but that could not be helped, and nothing can, Mr. Rugly. Never mind, I have a great respect for you, because I know you to be a lucky hand."

That was all I ever heard him say on the subject which had troubled him so much in his poverty-stricken days, when he begged me not to come to the house nor have anything to do with them, lest his uncle's prophecy about the killing of Sally should come to pass. I suppose the killing of her mind by the fortune which came through me must have been the proper interpretation of the dream, if it had any, and was not all a downright invention of Raxworth's fancy, running as it always did on stocks and shares. At all events, he made money, and that makes people take everything else uncommonly easy; yet somehow there is nobody's business I care less for doing, and I know he employs me only for being a lucky hand, which is a character worth having in the Stock Exchange.—Chambers's Journal.

RETURNING THE COMPLIMENT.—"What a lovely woman!" was the exclamation of Lord Chancellor Eldon, upon passing a beauty, when pacing up and down Westminister Hall, with his friend, the Master of the Rolls, previous to the opening of their respective courts. "What an excellent judge!" said the lady, when her sensitive ear caught the flattering decree of the Lord High Chancellor of England.

CHANGING PLACES.—The Bishop of Reitz thanked the Bishop of Lisieux for having consecrated him. "It is for me," said the latter, "to thank you. I was the ugliest bishop in France until you were elected."

A French writer has said that "to dream gloriously, you must act gloriously while you are awake, and to bring angels down to converse with you in your sleep, you must labour in the cause of virtue during the day."

The Derbyshire Courier says it is highly probable that the Newstead estate, including the Abbey, will be purchased by the Duke of Portland.

IT MUST NEVER BE.

(From the Saturday Review, June 23.)

Some injustice has been done to the Commissioners appointed to inquire into the defences of the country by the criticisms which have been naturally made upon a report which, after providing for the safety of the dockyards, offers no suggestion for the defence of the metropolis—the most vital point of all, and the one against which an invading army would be certain, if practicable, to direct its first attack. It seems to have been assumed, in the Times and elsewhere, that the Commission rather underrate the importance of fortifying London; but it is apparent on the face of their report that they are at least as anxious as any of their critics can be that their own scheme of defences should be completed by adequate works for the protection of the capital. The memorandum of instructions which accompanied the Commission limited the inquiry to the defence of the dockyards, and the Commissioners expressly state that the defence of the metropolis had not been brought under their consideration. Perhaps they may have somewhat exceeded the strict limits of their authority by referring, even incidentally, to the subject, and by eliciting from Lord Overstone the important opinion which they annex to their report, upon the fatal consequences which a successful attack on the capital would involve. The Commissioners, instead of being, as has been rather hastily assumed, at variance with the common sense of the country upon this point, ought rather to be regarded as lending their high authority to the judgment which Lord Overstone has given as to the ruin which a hostile occupation of London would cause to the commercial interests of the country, perhaps also to the national spirit, and even to the national existence. All who have yet been heard on the subject are so far unanimous that they agree that no effort within our power, no outlay in any sense within our means, would be misplaced in rendering the heart of the country proof against attack. The most competent authorities declare that, hazardous as such an enterprise would be, a dash at London by a powerful army of invaders might very possibly be successful if no preparations had been made to guard against such a contingency. The only serious question which can remain under such circumstances is, whether London is capable of being placed in a state of defence; and this also would be answered without hesitation in the affirmative by any engineer officer who had the needful means placed at his disposal. The cost would no doubt be great, though it would probably not approach the aggregate outlay which is proposed for the essential but still secondary purpose of protecting the most exposed of our dockyards.

The ascertained facts need only to be stated to lead to one inevitable conclusion. London is not absolutely safe from capture. So little is it believed to be so, that there is no subject which has been considered more carefully by French generals that the tactics by which the conquest of our capital might be most readily effected. If the enterprise were made altogether hopeless and desperate, not only should we escape the possibility of a calamity the extent of which cannot be measured, but one of the strongest temptations to war would be taken away from our restless neighbours. Even if we were quite sure that London, defended only by such forces as might be gathered at a week's notice, would witness the defeat of any enemy who was audacious enough to attack it, it would be worth something in the interests of peace to instil the same conviction into the minds of the French Emperor and his colonels. As a mere matter of money, it would pay better to spend a large sum in preventing the attempt than to lay out ten times as much in defeating it if it were once made. London is not impregnable, and is not believed by the leaders of foreign armies to be so. Lord Overstone was asked by the commissioners what would be the probable effect of the occupation of the capital by an invading army. His reply was, "I cannot contemplate or trace to its consequences such a supposition. My only answer is—it must never be;" and, small as the probability of such an event may be, no one who considers for a moment what London is—the centre of government, the centre of communication, the centre of commerce and finance, and the great depôt of our military resources (for Woolwich could not but share its fate)—can well hesitate to say with Lord Overstone that its capture is one of those things which must never be. The lines which protected London would, in truth, be the best fortification of the coast itself. Take away the great prize of victory, and no enemy would think it worth while to engage in an expedition so hazardous as a descent upon the shores of England must always be. A sudden raid or a destructive bombardment of one of our seaports, like that which reduced Sweaborg to ashes, would be the utmost that the boldest enemy would attempt; and when the works recommended by the Commission shall have been completed, this, too, will be placed beyonds the bounds of possibility. In fact, if the scheme of the report were supplemented by a thorough system of works for the protection of London, there would not be a weak point left in our armour, and all the advantages which our insular position gave us before the invention of steam would be again restored.

The only conceivable ground on which a scheme of fortifications can be objected to is that which was somewhat hastily taken up bp Sir Charles Napier, that the creation of land defences implies a departure from what always must be the only safe policy for England, to rely mainly on her fleet for safety at home and victory abroad. If to strengthen the capital and the ports were to weaken the fleet, we should be quite as reluctant as Sir Charles Napier to see such a policy in the ascendant. But the effect would be exactly the reverse, and the primary purpose of entrenchments round Portsmouth, Plymouth, and Chatham, is not to enable them to sustain a prolonged siege, but to make them safe against a coup de main or a bombardment, and to set the whole fleet free to maintain the command of the Channel, and to make the ocean safe for our commercial marine.

In one sense, fortifications may be called a substitute for ships; but it is only by releasing them from duties which the navy ought never to be called on to perform. It is throwing away half the value of a magnificent steam fleet to post it in detachments at our dockyards; yet this is what must be done if a naval war broke out while our arsenals remained in their present unprotected state. Ships like the Renown and the Agamemnon are meant for some other purpose than to serve as mere floatting batteries to stop the entrance of a harbour; and sailors should of all men most rejoice in a scheme which would give them free scope to manœuvre at will, without the fear that a cruise of four-and-twenty hours might leave Portsmouth or Devonport at the mercy of a hostile fleet. The complete system of defence which common sense suggests for such a country as England is threefold. The first and most important line is the Channel itself. To make this as strong as possible, it is essential that every available ship should be relieved of all other duties than the patrol of the narrow seas which form our outermost lines. The coast itself in all its length is scarcely to be regarded as defensible at all, except by the opertions of a manœuvring army, and the fortifications of the dockyards will be chiefly valuable as a subsidiary means of strengthening our occupation of the Channel. Lastly comes the inner line by which London must be guarded, and which will serve indirectly as the most effective protection to the long line of unprotected shore. With such provisions against sudden disaster, the navy would be ready in all its strength for any enterprise to which it might be called, and would find in the destruction of an enemy's dockyards or the blockade of his fleet, a more congenial occupation than in standing sentry over defenceless harbours and arsenals of our own. Further inquiry will probably be needed before the best mode of fortifying London can be ascertained. Whether, as Colonel Jebb has proposed, works along the escarpment of the chalk range, which passes through Guildford and Farnham should form the outer system of defence—or whether a chain of detached forts round the suburbs of London would suffice for its security—are purely military matters, which will probably be solved without much difficulty when once the resolution has been taken to do whatever may be necessary to enable us to laugh at all threats of invasion. Clearly the protection of some of the principal dockyards is but a half measure, and unless we are satisfied to contemplate an attempt at invasion as a not very improbable event, and the capture of London itself as within the limits of possibility, the work must be completed by a thorough system of defence for the metropolis. Humanly speaking, it is happily in the power of this country to say of a successful invasion, not only "it must never be," but "it shall never be." Such a privilege is worth purchasing at a much greater cost than the fortifications of London could, on any plan entail.

TAKING HIS SIZE.—A railway director, not on very friendly terms with Mr. Hudson, one day angrily said to him, alluding to his former business of a linen-draper, "Mr. Hudson, I always carry a tape with me, to measure you with." "Do you?" was the instant reply; "I can easily measure you, Mr. ——, without one."

THE AUSTRIAN BUDGET.—In a letter from Vienna, we find the following paragraph:—"As copies of the draught of the Budget for 1861 are in many hands, some interesting particulars have come to the knowledge of the public. The Emperor has for his own person 315,000fl.; the Empress Mother (the widow of the late Emperor Francis), 52,500fl.; the reigning Empress, 105,000fl.; the Archduchess Sophia, 52,500fl.; the Archdukes Francis Charles, Louis (the brother of the late Emperor Francis), and Reignier, 169,200fl. The charity fund of the Emperor is 66,150fl. The outlay for the persons dependant on the Court is 1,096,709fl.; and the annual cost of orders, 43,724fl. The annual 'subvention' for the Imperial Royal Opera is 210,000fl. and that for the Burg Theatre, in which there are first-rate dramatic performances in the German language, 84,000fl."

RUSSIAN HOSPITALITY.—We read in a letter from Florence: "A nobleman, Cavalier Luggi Villarosa, befriended by Mr. Goodwin, the British Consul (a functionary highly respected and cherished at Palermo), applied for refuge to one of the English ships anchored in the harbour. The captain repulsed him, alleging his instructions, which only allowed him to extend his protection to British subjects. The unhappy Villarosa was more fortunate in his appeal to the humanity of a Russian captain, who took him on board, and when the police called for their prisoner, laconically pointed to the colours at his yard-arm, and said that the fugitive was already in Russia."

IMPORTANT DISCOVERY IN BIBLICAL LORE.—Mr. Mayer (the proprietor of a fine museum of antiquities and works of art in Liverpool) has now in his possession a papyrus, which with many others, was brought from Thebes, in Egypt, by the Rev. Henry Stobart. This papyrus having been entrusted to Dr. Simonides, has been discovered to contain the 19th chapter of St. Matthew, written in the Greek uncial character; and which will be viewed with great interest by bibliopolists, as it sets at rest that long misunderstood part of the twenty-fourth verse, relating to the passage of a camel through the eye of a needle, which arose from the wrong reading of the Greek text. The manuscript is believed to be older than any other Christian document known to exist.

BILLS DISHONOURED ABROAD.—It is important to call the attention of the mercantile public to the fact of the verdict given in the case of "Suse v. Pompe," in December last, having been reversed by the Court of Appeal. The judgment of the lower court was to the effect that the purchaser of a bill drawn in London, and payable abroad, could, in the event of that bill being dishonoured, exercise the option of drawing upon the seller in London for the sum of foreign coin to which the bill purported to entitle him, at the rate of exchange current at the place where the dishonour occurred, or of sending the bill back to London and demanding that the amount paid for it in sterling should be refunded. On appeal, however, this decision has been set aside, and it is now established that the holder of a bill which has been dishonoured abroad is not entitled to recover from the seller in England more than the re-exchange—that is to say, the value of the florins, francs, or whatever the sum stated on the face may be, expressed in English money, at the rate of exchange on the day of dishonour, with the interest and expenses.—Times.

THE RURAL LABOURER'S PROSPECTS.—There is much reform needed, at this moment, in the treatment of agricultural labourers, before their lot can at all answer to the conception of it as one of the healthiest and happiest of vocations; and, on the other hand, we all believe it impossible that the condition of the labourer should ever retrogress to what it has been. His vocation is now becoming one of skilled labour; and his qualifications and his wages must both rise. For clodpoles we shall henceforth have agricultural operatives, working by machinery, and paid according to their intelligence and skill. We see this happening already, and more and more extensively every year. We see prizes won—not so much now for sparing the rates, but for superior skill in the arts of agriculture, and for success in the accomplishments of horticulture. We see leisure hours and spare pennies spent in floricultural rivalry, instead of the public-house. We see men of John's order manifesting his virtues, with a fairer course before them. Under such improved circumstances the health and longevity of the class must steadily and rapidly improve.—Miss Martineau, in Once a Week.

CORPORATION COURTESY.—The public are aware of the degree of esteem in which the corporation of London are held by all the leading members of the commercial and financial world. A London merchant avoids all civic offices as an American gentleman avoids a political nomination. There is no actual hostility to these dignitaries, however, for it is not in the nature of the mercantile class to enter into agitations, so long as they are not personally annoyed. But a remarkable instance of the results of this indifference is now to be quoted, which, it may be hoped, will assist to stimulate the reformers at the-west-end in dealing with city privileges. The Royal Exchange is under the control of the corporation, and the merchants of London meet in its open area every day. The exposure to the weather having been found painfully inconvenient and injurious, they addressed a very humble petition to the "Worshipful Joint Grand Gresham Committee," praying that a glass roof or dome might be provided, intimating, at the same time, that if the trifling outlay which would be required should be deemed an obstacle, they would themselves meet any difficulty on that score. This petition was headed by Messrs. Baring and Rothschild, nearly all the Bank directors, and the principal partners in most of our great firms. It remained unanswered for more than six months. A reply was then requested, and a verbal message was sent back that before the plan of the building had been agreed to, twelve of the principal merchants had been consulted, who unanimously decided for an open exchange, and that, therefore, no alteration would take place. When a list of those twelve merchants was requested, no names could be furnished. It only remains to be added that these circumstances took place ten years ago, that the merchants of London have ever since sustained the inconvenience, and that every passing year has increased their sense of it, that at Antwerp, and other Continental Bourses, examples of a simple, perfect, and inexpensive remedy are furnished, that it has now been suggested for another movement to be made to endeavour to get the requisite alteration commenced during the present season, so as to be completed before the setting in of another winter, and that the sufferers, after the treatment they have experienced, decline to renew the question, and to subject themselves to the possibility of further rudeness.—Times.

AN INDIAN ENVOY TO ENGLAND.—We read in the New York Courier:—"A few days since, a lone daughter of the forest, Nah-nee-bahwe-qua, which in English means an upright woman, highly gifted by nature, and improved by a liberal education, arrived here on her way to England, on a mission to the Queen of Great Britain, to appear in person before her Majesty, and state the sufferings of her people. Her people are the Objibwas, residing within the boundaries of the province of Upper Canada; they number about one thousand souls, and occupy three little villages. Their home is at Owen's Sound, on the northern shore of Lake Huron. These people have embraced Christianity, have become civilised, have devoted their lives to labour, have good farms, well cultivated, good houses, and pleasant homes. These pleasant homes are about being taken from them by the ruthless hand of power, and these poor Ojibwas are to be driven into the wilderness, upon a barren waste, to suffer, to starve, to die. Nah-nee-bahwe-qua on Sabbath last attended Friends' meeting, and there offered up a fervent prayer, after which she addressed the meeting, and the recital of the sufferings of her people brought tears in the eyes of Friends. She is a member of the Methodist Church, and has with her the credentials of her membership and good standing, together with a letter of authority signed by the chief of her nation, to appear as their representative to the Queen. It is to be hoped that the Society of Friends in England will interest themselves with the Queen in behalf of the suffering Ojibewas."

THE SPANIEL AND THE PARTRIDGE.—A dog, named Tan, who was an old parlour favourite, when a partridge, answering to the name of Bill, became also domesticated in the same family. There was some danger in placing them together, for Tan was a lively and spirited spaniel, very apt to torment the cats, and bark at any exciting object. But the experiment was tried, and Bill, being very tame, did not feel much alarm at its natural foe, and gradually all shyness wore off, and a warm friendship was established between them. When the hour of dinner arrived, the partridge invariably flew on its mistress's shoulders, emitting the shrill notes familiar to sportsmen; the spaniel leaped about with equal excitement, and a dish of bread and milk being placed on the floor, the two fed in perfect amity together. The meal being ended, the spaniel would retire to a corner to sleep, while the partridge would nestle between its legs, and refrain from stirring till its friend awoke. Whenever the dog went out with its mistress, the bird displayed the greatest uneasiness till its return; and once, when the partridge was accidently shut up through the day, the dog searched for it about the house with a mournful cry. At length the spaniel was stolen; from that time the partridge refused all food, and on the seventh day died from grief.—Cassell's Popular Natural History.

WILL OF SIR C. BARRY.—The will of Sir C. Barry, R.A., F.R.S., was proved by the executors and trustees, Charles Barry and E. M. Barry, his sons, both architects; W. H. Barry, his nephew, and T. Guebar, solicitor. The personality was sworn under £80,000. To his wife he has left all his furniture, plate, linen, china, and carriages for her own absolute use; also an immediate legacy of £500, and a life interest in the whole of his property, real and personal, with power of appointment and disposal by his will to their children in such manner as she may direct; and in default thereof he bequeaths the same to his children equally. The trustees are invested with power to carry out and complete building contracts in hand and on land near his residence, Clapham Common. The will is concise, and is contained on three sheets of brief, and bears date December 12, 1857.

THE VICTORIA AND PIMLICO RAILWAY.—This line, which forms a connection between all the railways south of the Thames and the Victoria station, now in course of erection at Pimlico, was opened on Saturday. This important line was commenced in the autumn of 1859; the first stone of the viaduct over the Thames was laid on the 9th of June, 1859; so that the time occupied in erecting this great work has been exactly twelve months.—Times, June 11.

THE VALUE OF THE PUBLIC TIME.—Notice of Motion.—Mr. Punch to move that, immediately under the clock of the House of Commons, there be placed a large placard-board, handsomely framed and glazed, on which shall be inscribed, in illuminated characters, the legend—"TEMPUS FUGIT."

THE LATE G. P. R. JAMES.—A very interesting incident in the life of the late eminent novelist has been told us by one of his oldest and most intimate literary friends. When Mr. James was a young man his cousin was about to marry the daughter of an eminent lawyer, and the title deeds of this gentleman's entailed property were at the request of the father of the young lady submitted to his examination. The keen lawyer discovered that the parents of the gentleman, although moving in the best society of London, had never been married. Mr. James was made acquainted with this awkward fact, and at the same time informed that he himself was the heir-at-law. The match was about to be broken off, and much distress occasioned on every side, when Mr. James, having quietly taken possession of the property, went at once to the unhappy young man, his relative, and conveyed to him the whole of the property, which amounted to a very handsome independence.—Daily Paper.

CAPTAIN BLAKELY'S GUN.—Cannon may next year be bored hexagonally—with fifty groves—with two—with any other number—or perhaps with none; but they will certainly be built in concentric tubes, or what amounts to the same thing, they will be wrapt round with wire, all parts sharing fairly in the work. It is our duty, we believe, to urge the Government to prove the gratitude of the country to the person who discovered how this could be done—who has devoted his entire energies for six years to persuading us to use his most valuable invention, spending several thousands of pounds in systematic experiments, totally unaided by the country, while every pecuniary assistance was offered to Mr. Whitworth and Sir William Armstrong. Our readers need not be told that we speak of Captain Blakely.—Mechanics' Magazine.

A NEAT RETORT.—Two newly-made Justices of the Peace met a Rev. Mr. Thom, as he was riding home, and resolved to quiz him. "Ah!" said one of them, "you are not like your Master, for he was content to ride on an ass." "An ass!" exclaimed the minister; "there's no such a beast to be gotten now-a-days." "Ah! how's that," said the wits. "Because," replied Mr. Thom, "they now make them all Justices of the Peace."

A USEFUL HINT FOR SWIMMERS.—A correspondent of the Field says that cramp in the legs may be easily and instantly cured, thus:—On the moment of its seizure in the calf of the leg, the instep should be forcibly drawn up or flexed on the leg, and the cure will be as sudden as the attack. I have tried this very many times, and it never fails.

USEFUL TUBS.—Jones: "I say, Smith, what beastly old tubs our men-of-war were!" Smith: "Nevertheless they helped our fathers to do a smart bit of cleaning; they scoured the seas."

A DISTINCTION.—Indulgent Mamma: "A cup of tea? Yes, my child, you shall have a cup of tea, with pleasure!" Little Boy: "No, not with pleasure—I don't like it!—a cup of tea, with lots of sugar."

A MOTHER'S LOVE.—Children, look in those eyes; listen to that dear voice; notice the feeling of even a single touch that is bestowed upon you by that gentle hand? Make much of it while yet you have that most precious of all good gifts—a loving mother. Read the unfathomable love of those eyes; the kind anxiety of that tone and look, however slight your pain. In after-life you may have friends—fond, dear, kind friends—but never will you have again the inexpressible love and gentleness lavished upon you, which none but a mother bestows. Often do I sigh, in my struggles with the hard, uncaring world, for the sweet, deep security I felt when of an evening, nestling to her bosom, I listened to some quiet tale, suitable to my age, read in her tender and untiring voice. Never can I forget her sweet glances, cast upon me when I appeared to sleep; never her kiss of peace at night! Years have passed away since we laid her beside my father in the old churchyard; yet, still her voice whispers from the grave, and her eye watches over me, as I visit spots long since hallowed to the memory of my mother.—Macaulay.

PLEASURES OF THE IMAGINATION.—A man of polite imagination is let into a great many pleasures that the vulgar are not capable of receiving. He can converse with a picture, and find an agreeable companion in a statue. He meets with a secret refreshment in a description, and often feels a greater satisfaction in the prospects of fields and meadows, than another does in the possession. It gives him, indeed, a kind of property in everything he sees, and makes the most rude, uncultivated parts of nature administer to his pleasures, so that he looks upon the world, as it were, in another light, and discovers in it a multitude of charms that conceal themselves from the generality of mankind.—Addison.

AMERICAN ELOQUENCE.—As a specimen of the style of criticism in which some American writers indulge, we extract from an American paper the following, premising that the writer is a lady, and is criticising a magazine story. She says—"I am so so dazzled by a reading of the first number that I hardly dare express an opinion of it. So much splendour gives rise to distrust in my mind. Is there no redundance in all this blaze of glowing rhetoric—in this passionate outpouring of wildering words—in this sensuous eloquence of poetic fervour? I hope not; I hope all the glory of light in this unmetred poem irradiates from the illimitable sunstar. But the author must not blind us with unshadowed radiance—masses of lustrous blue, heaped upon the passionate eagerness of crimson, and that again upon the majesty of proud purple, floating tremulously upon the tradiate pulses of pure light, through whose fiery gaps and golden chasms sound in the heavenly distance stops of planetary music. But the eye and the heart grow sick and languid with ravishment, and turn towards the distant grey, through whose solemn monotony shines the faint tremor of stars."

A NOBLE WOMAN.—The Official Gazette of Turin says:—"A lady of Paris, who wishes her name not to be divulged, has sent to the King's Government through its consulate the sum of 20,000f. towards the expenses of the royal army. The Government is happy to inform the public of this act of modesty and generosity, which proves in how great a degree the Italian cause has gained the sympathy and affection of the highest and most enlightened classes of society."

A SALT LAKE INCIDENT.—A correspondent of the New York Herald, at Salt Lake City, writes:—"On Tuesday evening we very nigh had a bloody affair over the apprehension of one Manhard. Emboldened by the previous week's proceedings, Manhard and two of his associates rode up to the court-house during the sitting of the court, and finding there the sheriff, the principal object of their hatred, unblushingly extended to him the hand of salutation—a very general custom in the West, more particularly among a people surrounded by Indians, to whom the hand must be extended at first greeting as a sign of good feeling and fellowship. Sheriff Burton took the hand of Manhard, and after the usual Indian salutation—'How? how?'—informed him that he was his prisoner. In a moment the mule danced under the biting of the spurs; but the sheriff was not to be either trampled or thrown. He firmly continued his hold of the one hand, and with a dexterous leap threw the other around the neck of Manhard, and there mule, criminal, and Sheriff clung together with more than loving affection. It was an interesting sight. The associates of the apprehended men immediately drew their revolvers and called upon the Sheriff to release their comrade. The dancing of the mule and the struggle of the men made it impossible for them to fire with safety. The noise and bawling reaching the inside of the court, the officers instantly rushed out to the rescue of the Sheriff; rifles were out and levelled, and the associates of Manhard owed their escape and lives to 'cheap percussions.' The Sheriff kept his man, the others escaped. For the latter the officers have writs for threatening the life of the Sheriff in the discharge of his duty; and, find them when they may, they will assuredly be severely dealt with."

LORD BROUGHAM AND THE AFRICAN.—Before leaving Liverpool on Friday, Lod Brougham and the Lord Bishop of Oxford, accompanied by Mr. William Brown, paid a visit of inspection to the new Free Library now being erected in Shaw's Brow, and were conducted over the building by the clerk of the works. At the request of Lord Brougham, an emancipated slave, who, coming over to this country many years ago, served a seven years' apprenticeship with a bricklayer, and is now employed at the new building, was introduced to his lordship, who shook him warmly by the hand, and expressed the delight and gratification afforded to him by seeing a free artisan from Africa amongst English labourers. On receiving from his lordship a present in money, he expressed his gratitude not only for the gift, but also for the exertions of his lordship, but for which, he said, he should very likely not have been in his present position. He said he should prize his lordship's gift more than anything he had ever received his life, and would preserve it as a treasure. It need hardly be said that with regard to the Free Library, Lord Brougham admired much the splendid building which he was inspecting, and the ability displayed in making the internal arrangements.—Liverpool Albion.

LECTURE BY A RETURNED CONVICT.—A young woman, named Sidney Keelen, convicted at Armagh summer assizes, 1849, on a charge of stealing cattle, and transported for seven years, has just returned to Ireland, from Van Diemen's Land, and is at present delivering a course of lectures on her personal history and the horrors of transportation, in various towns in Ulster. On Wednesday she addressed an audience in the Market House, Armagh. She was introduced by the governor of Armagh gaol. Miss Keelen speaks very fluently, though occasionally she betrays her imperfect education. She is about twenty-eight years of age, neatly attired, and seems perfectly at home before an audience. Her remarks show that she is an attentive observer, and desirous of doing something for her sex, especially warning them against whisky drinking, the bad effects of which she has seen so much of during her absence from Ireland.—Northern Daily Whig.

DANGEROUS MATCHES.—Among the dangers attending these little fire-generators, one which is little known, and of which slight, if any, warning has been given, is their liability to spontaneous combustion. No prudent person will keep them in his house, except in incombustible vessels or boxes, such as those made of earthenware, metal, or stone. If this precaution could be insisted upon, it would almost go to the complete suppression of matches tipped with white phosphorus, i. e., that which is white before it is coloured artificially. But what have we to replace this popular method of robbing a light? Therein lies the difficulty. True, we still have red or amorphous-phosphorus; but this is not easy to obtain pure. Moreover, it is, perhaps, not quite so innocent as it pretends to be. An opinion has already been expressed that white phosphorus may be regenerated or reproduced; that is to say, that red phosphorus may, with time, resume its original molecular state, and consequently recover all its chemical and organoleptic properties. But, as long as no fact of poisoning or setting fire to houses can be justly laid to the charge of red phosphorus, we may continue to employ it as we have hitherto done, when we can get it. It is said that the French insurance offices intend presenting a petition to the Emperor, praying that a law may be passed to prohibit the sale of matches made with white phosphorus, and allow none but those made of amorphous phosphorus to be made for the future. Official returns show that the average annual number of accidental fires in France was about 2200 up to 1838, before friction matches came into use. In 1844 the number had risen to 4000, which has constantly increased, till in 1857 there were 10,000 fires. These figures show that it is most desirable to provide some means for preventing such a destruction of property.

BUTTER, CHEESE, AND EGGS.—The quantity of butter imported into London in 1859 was 421,534 cwt., and the Customs duties received for it amounted to £104,587. The quantity of cheese was 397,225 cwt., and the duties came to £49,656. Eggs have not been counted since 1853, when the number exceeded 123½ millions; but in 1859 the extent of the packages was 743,572 cubic feet; and the duty, at 8d. per foot, amounted to £24,787.

WEDDING MISHAP.—A few days ago a loving young couple went, accompanied by friends, to a church not far from this city, to enter into the bonds of holy matrimony. The wedding service had commenced, and had progressed to the point where the ring is produced, when a singular hitch took place. No ring was forthcoming. Not that the bridegroom had, in the bustle and nervousness of preparation for the important ceremony, forgotten to put the ring in his pocket on leaving home, but he was ignorant that the little golden hoop was required in the marriage ceremony. Here was a difficulty! The good-natured clerk said he would try to find one which he would lend for the ceremony, but the officiating minister objected, and refused to go further in forging bonds where so important an element in the manufacture was wanting. In this difficulty the man who was thus placed in so neutral a position between the single and married state, was about to run in despair to this city to purchase a ring, when a second couple who had also come to the church with the like object of matrimony, touched with a fellow feeling, and perhaps by the tears of the disappointed bride, lent him their vehicle for the journey. He just contrived to get back with the ring in time for the marriage to be concluded within the lawful hours, the scrupulous minister having kindly awaited his return; and the pair went away in high spirits, all the happier for their previous disappointment.—Worcester Chronicle.

THE FIRST QUARREL MADE UP.—He only stood still at the top of the stairs and said, "Maggie, you're to come down." But she rushed to him, and clung round his neck, sobbing, "O! Tom, please forgive me; I can't bear it; I will always be good—always remember things; do love me, please, dear Tom." We learn to restrain ourselves as we get older. We keep apart when we have quarrelled, express ourselves in well-bred phrases, and in this way preserve a dignified alienation, showing much firmness on one side, and swallowing much grief on the other. We no longer approximate in our behaviour to the mere impulsiveness of the lower animals, but conduct ourselves in every respect like members of a highly civilised society. Maggie and Tom were still very much like young animals, and so she could rub her cheek against his, and kiss his ear in a random sobbing way; and there were tender fibres in the lad that had been used to answer to Maggie's fondling, so that he behaved with the weakness quite inconsistent with his resolution to punish her as much as she deserved; he actually began to kiss her in return, and say, "Don't cry, then, Maggie; here, eat a bit o' cake." Maggie's sobs began to subside, and she put out her mouth for the cake and bit a piece, and then Tom bit a piece, just for company, and they ate together, and rubbed each other's cheeks and brows and noses together while they ate, with a humiliating resemblance to two friendly ponies.—The Mill on the Floss.

STREET TRAMWAYS.—At the weekly meeting of the Liverpool Health Committe on Thursday, a report was submitted, from which it appeared that the borough engineer had estimated that of two plans for laying iron tramways in the streets the one would cost £3344 per mile, and the other £[illegible]357. The joint sub-committee of the Health and Watch committee, to which this report had been submitted, had resolved that in their opinion tramways properly and carefully laid, so as to be available for use by vehicles of every description, would conduce to the public benefit and convenience, and that the borough engineer should be requested to submit a model of such tramway as he thought most suitable for the traffic of the town. The report was referred back to the joint committee for information as to a suggestion that the report should be printed in extenso.—Times, May 19.

COALS IN THE EASTERN ARCHIPELAGO.—The prospectus has been issued of the Labuan Coal Company, with a capital of £100,000 in £10 shares. The directors have obtained from the British Government an exclusive grant to work the entire coal on the island, which has long been ascertained to be virtually inexhaustible. The consideration to the parties previously interested is to consist of 2,500 paid-up shares. The present price of coal equal to the Labuan quality at Singapore, Hongkong, &c., is 60s. to 65s. per ton, and reliable data seem to show that it could be delivered at Singapore by the Labuan Company, at a cost including freight and all charges of 24s. The company are bound to furnish the Government with supplies at a certain fixed price, but in other respects they have an open market, and the Peninsular and Oriental Company have already used 20,000 tons for their steamers. Chinese miners are considered to be obtainable in abundance, and it is estimated that 100,000 tons per annum can readily be raised and disposed of. The pit already sunk, with a moderate additional outlay, will yield 606,144 tons, and another pit is available which would furnish 1,293,600 tons. The directors take no remuneration except a percentage of ten per cent. on all surplus bona fide profits whenever the shareholders shall receive a clear yearly dividend of ten per cent. £1 per share will be payable on allotment, but no deposit is required to accompany applications.—Times.

LAW.

SUPREME COURT.—FRIDAY.

SITTINGS IN BANCO.

BEFORE Chief Justice Sir John Dickinson and Mr. Justice Milford.

SIEMSSEN AND OTHERS V. MANNING AND ANOTHER.

The argument in this case (the nature of which was reported in yesterday's Herald) again continued all day without being concluded.

IN INSOLVENCY.

Before Mr. Justice Milford.

CERTIFICATES.

The certificates of discharge granted by the Chief Commissioner to George Tully, Thomas Rogers, and Alexander Robinson were confirmed by the Court.

ESTATE OF HUGH MURPHY.

Upon the motion of Mr. Milford, the Court confirmed a plan of distribution in the above estate, shewing a first dividend of 2s. 4d. in the pound.

ESTATE OF HENRY PARKES.

A plan of distribution, shewing a dividend of 3s. 6d. in the pound on preferent claims in the above estate, had, upon the motion of Mr. Martin, Q.C., been conditionally confirmed last Friday. The condition was, that a person who had filed an objection, but did not appear to support it, should have another week's opportunity of coming in. This not having been done, the plan was held finally confirmed.

SITTINGS FOR THE TRIAL OF CAUSES.

Before Mr. Justice Wise and a jury of four.

THE BANK OF AUSTRALASIA V. HARRIS AND ANOTHER.

The trial of this case, which commenced on Wednesday, was now resumed and concluded. It was an action upon two bills at four and five months, from 1st July, 1859, each for £1336 8s. 8d., drawn by G. A. Lloyd and Co. upon the defendants, endorsed by the latter, and passed to the plaintiffs. The pleadings were voluminous and complex, but the substantial question at issue was, whether there had or had not been a fraudulent preference of the bank over the rest of Messrs. Lloyd and Co.'s creditors within the meaning of the section of the Insolvent Act.

Mr. Darvall, Q.C., Mr. Isaacs, and Mr. Francis appeared for the plaintiff; and Sir W. Manning, Q.C., Mr. Martin, Q.C., and Mr. Broadhurst, Q.C., for the defendants.

The evidence, as might naturally be expected in such a case, was very lengthy, involving enquiries as to the position of the firm of G. A. Lloyd and Co. at the time of the transactions out of which this action arose, and as to what had taken place between the local representative of the firm and the manager of the bank. The actual contest was as to whether the bills, before their acceptance by defendants, had been handed to the bank as security to cover future advances in the shape of an overdrawn account, or whether, without any previous agreement, that they should be deposited for this purpose, they were passed to the bank to secure the claims of the latter. The evidence of the then local representative of the firm, Mr. Smith, and that of Mr. Henderson, manager of the bank, was conflicting. The plaintiffs, being resident at Brisbane, the bills had been sent to them for acceptance, and had been so accepted; but the case of the bank was that they had been handed over as security before being thus remitted for acceptance. According to Mr. Smith, however, they had still remained the property, and at the disposition of the firm. Mr. Beilby, a partner in this house, was at Melbourne during the transactions between Smith and the bank, but was in Sydney, when the bills, having been accepted, were handed over. He so handed them over, because he regarded them as the property of the bank. A statement of the accounts and transactions between the firm and the bank would have to be very lengthy in order to be accurate, and there was no material question as to amount, while as to the important legal questions involved in this case it was fully understood that there would be an appeal to the Court in any event. There could be no doubt that at the time the bills were handed over the firm was indebted to the plaintiffs, to the defendants, and to others, and that they were not in a position to meet their current engagements. In fact, that they were practically insolvent. But no one was absolutely aware of the fact. This firm carried on business both in London and Sydney. There was some difference in the constitution of the English and colonial houses, but they were substantially the same. Mr. Lloyd was in London in May, 1859, when his firm there stopped payment. But, according to the then aspect of affairs, a large surplus of assets was expected. It was only after his return to the colony that the extent of losses and of consequent deficiency became fully ascertained. It was on the 28th of June that the bills were handed to the bank.

His Honor laid before the jury an exposition of the questions at issue, and of the leading features of the evidence.

We append a copy of the queries submitted to the jury, with their answers thereon:—

1. Was Harris and Co. creditors of Lloyd and Co. at the time of the agreement and endorsement? They were.
2. Was Lloyd indebted to the bank and to other persons at the time of delivering the bills to the bank? Yes.
3. Were they so at the time of the endorsement? Yes.
4. Was Lloyd and Co. at the time of such delivery insolvent? Yes.
5. Were they so at the time of the endorsement? They were.
6. Was it agreed between the bank and Smith that the bills were to be drawn against, and when accepted to be discounted and go to cover any amount drawn against them and any other debt existing at the time of such discount? We believe it was.
7. Was it a deposit to cover over draft, to be thereafter created? No.
8. Was it a deposit to cover a debt existing at the time of the deposit as well as a future debt? Yes.
9. Did any debt existing at the time of the delivery continue due at the time of the endorsement? Yes.
10. Did Beilby know that the firm was insolvent at the time of the agreement? No proof.
11. Did Lloyd, who was in England, know that the firm was insolvent? No proof.
12. Did he know at the time of the agreement that the colonial firm was insolvent? No proof.
13. Did he know at the time of the endorsement? Yes.
14. Had the transaction the effect of preferring the bank? Yes, it had.

This, as his Honor held, was substantially a finding for the defendants.

PETERS V. NIXON.

This was an action for money had and received, to which the defendant pleaded that he was never indebted, &c.

Mr. Stephen appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Blake for the defendant.

The plaintiff had employed the defendant, who was a collector and commission agent, to collect a promissory note from one Cowan. Defendant not being able to obtain payment from Cowan, had employed his own attorney, Mr. Michael, to sue the latter. Michael had obtained payment, but, as it would seem, had not paid the money to Nixon. The only evidence adduced was an affidavit by Nixon, setting out these facts, which had been used against. There was no substantial defence, except an argument, that as a matter of law no action for money had and received would lie in this case, inasmuch as there was no actual payment of the money to defendant, and no such privity between him and Michael as to create liability.

His Honor ruled that as defendant had been instructed to collect, and as there had been no instructions for the employment of Michael; the latter must be regarded as if he were defendant's servant; and a payment to one, was the same as a payment to the other.

Verdict for plaintiff, damages £52.

INSOLVENCY COURT.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT COURT.

THURSDAY.

BEFORE the Deputy Judge, and a jury of four.

ALLEN V. GLOVER.

The plaintiff claimed £169 10s., for money deposited with defendant's wife, for furniture detained by defendant from plaintiff, for money lent, money paid to defendant's use, and for work and labour. Defendant pleaded a set-off, amounting to £235 12s., for rent, board and lodging of plaintiff and her child, money paid, and money lent. Defendant's wife, who was killed by lightning on the North Shore, in the early part of 1859, was the plaintiff's daughter. After her death, defendant wishing to obtain a publican's license, requested plaintiff to come and reside with him. This she continued to do until June last, attending to his household affairs, and laying out her moneys in purchasing supplies. But, on the defendant getting married a second time, she was told her services were no longer required. For the time she remained she demanded £1 per week, and the money deposited, which she sued for, was stated by her to have been left with her daughter within a fortnight of her decease. The defendant's daughter deposed to the fact of money being given by her mother to her sister shortly before the decease of the latter, but could not speak as to the amount; she also proved that she carried supplies from her mother to defendant after her sister's death, and as to this latter point she was corroborated by a carter who occasionally gave her a lift. Defendant swore that he never engaged plaintiff; that she came and lived at his house whenever it suited her; that she agreed to pay for herself and child, and was indebted to him in a large amount for board and lodging, for arrears of rent, and cash lent, and that on her leaving him in June last, she had signed a document, acknowledging herself in his debt. Defendant also put in two receipts for two quarter's schooling, the amounts of which he stated he had paid, obtaining each receipt at the time of payment. In consequence of a peculiarity in the appearance of these documents, and the plaintiff having put in receipts covering the same period, the Judge directed the schoolmaster to be sent for, and it appeared by his evidence that the accounts produced by plaintiff were given at the time they bore date, but those produced by defendant were given by him within the last three weeks, at defendant's request, he having left a message requesting witness to call on him, which he did, and on the representation of defendant that the original receipts were lost, gave him fresh ones. There was also the evidence of the father of defendant's second wife and another witness, who were present when those receipts were given. The signing by the plaintiff of the memorandum before alluded to, was positively sworn to by two witnesses, as also by defendant, and was positively denied by her. She voluntarily wrote her name on a sheet of paper, which was handed to the jury with the other documents. His Honor explained to the jury that if they believed the plaintiff's evidence, she was entitled to recover to the extent of £150 10s. If, however, they did not believe her and believed the defendant, they would find in his favour, and they might, if they thought proper, give him a verdict for so much of his set-off as he had proved in excess of the plaintiff's claim. The jury after an absence of three-quarters of an hour, found for the plaintiff, £150 10s. In the early part of the case Mr. Isaacs appeared for defendant, but had to leave in consequence of his attendance being required at the Supreme Court. Mr. D. L. Levy afterwards appeared to examine defendant's witnesses, which Mr. Windeyer objecting to, his Honor refused to allow; eventually, Mr. Sheppard appeared in lieu of Mr. Isaacs. Plaintiff's attorney, Mr. Roberts; defendant's attorney, Mr. Bradley. This case did not terminate until eight o'clock.

FRIDAY.

TOOLE V. M'CULLOCH.

The plaintiff's particulars in this case being objected to by Mr. Butler for insufficiency, the further hearing was postponed until Thursday on payment of costs of the day. Plaintiff, in the meantime, to file fresh particulars.

ROUTLEDGE V. ADAMS.

This was an action for breach of covenant in not keeping in tenantable repair certain premises in the Botany Swamp, demised for seven years from July, 1853, by plaintiff to defendant. The evidence for the defendant went to show that a two-roomed hut without a ceiling, built of uprights and laced with boughs of trees, and plastered inside and out, was the only building on the land, and that the want of repair was owing to natural decay. Verdict for defendant. Mr. Sheppard for plaintiff, Mr. S. C. Brown for defendant.

WELSH V. SCOTT AND OTHERS.

The plaintiff claimed £89 for wages as commander of the Sir John Hervey, steamship, from which, as he alleged, he was wrongfully discharged, and £100 damages for such wrongful discharge. Plaintiff was engaged by defendants after they became the purchasers at auction, and then plaintiff was dismissed before the vessel was ready for sea. For the defence it was contended that by his extravagance defendants had put the owners to an expense of upwards of £5000 in fitting out the vessel, which cost them but £4100, and did not duly account for moneys received by him. Verdict for plaintiff, £7. Mr. S. C. Brown for plaintiff, Mr. Hellyer for defendant.

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.

FRIDAY.

BEFORE the Police Magistrate, with Messrs. E. S. Hill, Cullen, Cooper, Cohen, R. Hill, Peden, and Campbell.

Eight drunkards were fined 10s. each, and one 20s. One old female offender was sentenced to seven days' imprisonment.

Ann Munn, for disorderly conduct in a public place, was sent to Darlinghurst for seven days.

The only other prisoner was Ann M'Donald. Inspector Singleton deposed that yesterday he apprehended the prisoner by virtue of a warrant, in which she was charged with having, on or about the 14th August instant, administered strychine, with intent to kill and murder Albert Henry Bracher; in reply, she merely said, "I do not know what is against me." Caroline Barr, residing with her mother in Burton-street, deposed that she is acquainted with the prisoner, who lives with the father of the deceased, Albert Henry Bracher, in South-street; Albert Bracher was her (witness's) nephew, aged six years and four months, and her mother was paid by his father for his maintenance; about one o'clock on Tuesday week, the boy went to see his father, who in the evening brought him home, and remained with him about twenty minutes; the boy seemed fatigued, and witness took off his boots; soon after his father left he cried, looked pale, and seemed unusually swollen—so much so, that she took off his usual dress and clothed him in something looser; in answer to her enquiry what he had eaten, he said that he had had part of an orange, some bread and butter, and some tea; he showed witness his mouth saying, "Cary, Ann M'Donald put her finger into my mouth, and said that something is eating away this tooth;" put him to bed about nine o'clock; about three o'clock in the morning of Wednesday she and her mother were awoke by the boy's moaning, and her mother went to him; witness saw him at eight o'clock and dressed him; he complained of his head, and appeared to be very ill; shortly afterwards, he commenced violent retching and purging, which continued for some hours; sent for his father, who called in Dr. Low, who attended the boy until his death, about two o'clock on Thursday morning, and afterwards made a post mortem examination of the body; prisoner called to see the boy on Wednesday evening, and said that she had peeled an orange for him and gave him some, the child suffered from intense thirst, and shortly before he expired had several fits. This was all the evidence forthcoming, and inspector Singleton asked for a remand. Mr. Michael, for prisoner, submitted that no remand ought to be granted—that no evidence had been adduced upon which his client ought to have been in any way interfered with, much less held in custody. Captain Scott said that the charge was of a very grave character, and demanded the fullest enquiry, for which purpose he should detain the prisoner. Mr. Michael applied for bail, which was also refused.

An order by consent was made in Packer v. M'Laurin, for payment of £2 per month for seven years towards the support of an illegitimate child, of which the parties are father and mother.

WATER POLICE COURT.

FRIDAY.

BEFORE the Water Police Magistrate, Mr. H. Armitage, and Mr. J. Shoobert.

Joseph N. Bennett, storekeeper, and Eliza Norris, without home or occupation, were fined 10s. each for drunkenness in the streets; in default of payment imprisonment for twenty-four hours.

Daniel Joyce, licensed victualler, Hero of Waterloo, Fort and Windmill streets, and John Lord licensed victualler, Waterman's Arms, Harrington-street, were fined 20s. each for Sunday liquor selling.

Ellen Jackson, George-street, was charged with a breach of the Police Act, for keeping a dog within the boundaries of the city without having registered it. Defendant produced registers for three dogs, and on promising that she would get rid of two of them the information was withdrawn.

The following cases were dismissed:—Joseph Parker, a seaman, brought up upon suspicion that he was a deserter; George Cook, seaman, British Merchant, charged with having broached a cask of port wine, part of cargo; John Williams, seaman, charged with desertion from the Lizzie Oakford. A charge against Benjamin Lovell, baker, George-street, for assaulting and robbing (by the garotte process) Felix Bradly, a seaman, was remanded until Monday next. The summons case: William Reynolds v. Henry Russell, threatening language, as withdrawn.

THE LY-EE-MOON STEAMSHIP.—This vessel being completed, a trial of her speed was made on the river yesterday. She attained the astonishing speed, under steam alone, of 16¼ knots an hour, being above 19 miles an hour in still water. This vessel is built for the China trade, upon the proportions given by the commander Captain Norman Hill. The constructors of the hull being the Thames Iron Ship Building Company; engines by Seaward and Co. She is 1000 tons burden, and 350 nominal horse power, and is fitted with all recent improvements for steamships of the first-class. A numerous company were on board, including Mr. Dent, Mr. P. Rolt, Mr. Ash (designer of the ship), Mr. Galloway, and Mr. Brunel.—Times, May 30.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

Friday, 24th August.

THE volunteer movement is still progressing. Thirty members of the Penrith rifles were sworn in on Tuesday. This evening a meeting is to be held at Paddington, for the organisation of a volunteer corps in connection with that place.

On Monday a deputation waited upon the Colonial Secretary to urge the formation of Hamilton-lane, for want of which formation there is now a great nuisance arising from the Tank Stream. The Corporation officers object to do anything to the street until it has been proclaimed, formed, and handed over by the Government. The latter although admitting, as would seem, the obligation to form new streets before handing them over to the Municipal Council, hold that the Council must do the work and get it allowed in account. Now as there are disputed accounts between the Government and the Corporation, in which the latter is held greatly indebted, there would be some difficulty in getting anything allowed. The evil, then, seems without a present remedy, and this was, in effect, the answer given to the deputation.

The lecture upon "Havelock," which was delivered about a fortnight ago before the Young Men's Christian Association by the Rev. Thomas Smith, was repeated, by request, at the Temperance Hall, on Monday evening.

Some fine specimens of auriferous quartz have been received from the Peel River Diggings.

It has been determined by Mr. T. R. Pittard, the Curator and Secretary of the Australian Museum, to give a course of weekly lectures at that institution on the classification of animals. The first of these lectures was delivered on Wednesday, in presence of a large audience, including the Governor-General and many of our leading colonists. This is an admirable movement. It is at the Museum, where every kind of illustrative specimen is at hand, that lectures of this kind can be best understood. At the proper season there are lectures of a similar kind, i.e. on botany, in the Botanic Gardens. The student of natural history can now, therefore, have free teaching in every branch of that science.

A child, named William Edward Wallace, has been accidentally drowned, at Black Creek.

Two miners, named John Bullock and James Stewart, have been very dangerously injured by the sudden explosion of a charge of blasting powder.

A conversational meeting in connection with the Church of England Sunday School Institute was held on Tuesday, in the Church Society's house. A paper from the Dean of Sydney on "Dangers and Duties" was read and discussed.

A fire broke out on Tuesday, on the premises of Mr. O'Neil, confectioner. It arose from a crack in the oven. The fire was extinguished, but not before it had destroyed some £30 worth of property.

On the evening of the same day a lecture on the life of Benjamin Franklin was delivered by Mr. Chisholm, before the members of St. Benedict's Catholic Young Men's Association.

A public meeting, in connection with the Balmain Total Abstinence Society, for the advocacy of temperance principles, was held at the Balmain School of Arts, on Wednesday evening.

A person named Richard Andrews, said to be a monomaniac, made an attempt to cut his throat, on Wednesday. We believe he is not dead, up to this morning.

A Dane, named Harold Oscar Valdemar Johnson, aged about 38, died suddenly, at Caulfield's lodging-house, Clarence-street, from suffocation. The deceased, who was ordinarily a man of sober habits, had been indulging freely in intoxicating liquors, and while in a state of almost helpless drunkenness, was choked by a piece of beef sticking in his throat.

Gottlieb Beck, aged twenty-three, was drowned on Tuesday at the Corporation Baths. When he was observed to be sinking in deep water, the lessee of the baths, Mr. Wilson, who was at some distance, but on the alarm being given, he hastened to the spot, plunged in, and brought the body on shore. Life, however, was extinct. The coroner's jury very properly suggested that there ought to be a small boat at the place, and that there should be also life buoys hung up in conspicuous situations.

The City Auditors have made various suggestions as to financial management in certain respects, and have been well snubbed for their pains by the aldermen.

A woman named Mary Ann Chabot, aged fifty-three, has died suddenly, but, as has since been ascertained, from a disease of long standing.

A boy named Albert Henry Bracher had died suddenly under suspicious circumstances, and an examination of the contents of his stomach by Messrs. Watt and Norrie, chemists, has disclosed the presence of strychnine. A woman named Anne Macdonald, who had been cohabiting with the father of the deceased, has been arrested on suspicion of having administered the poison. The boy's mother had died during his infancy, and since her death the child had lived with his grandmother. Eighteen months ago, when the child came to see his father, Macdonald, who was then in the habit of drinking to excess, assaulted the child, threw him on the pavement, and broke his nose. For this assault she was prosecuted by the father, and was sentenced to six months' imprisonment. On being released, she again went to live with the elder Bracher; but it was said that her other habits had changed for the better, and that she appeared kind to the boy when he came to the house.

The Gas Company has held its half-yearly meeting, and declared a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum for the half-year, with a bonus of five per cent.

A sum of £96 18s. has been subscribed towards the relief of the wives and children of soldiers now absent at New Zealand.

A very able and, at the present juncture, most interesting lecture, on "Taranaki, and its troubles," was delivered at the Temperance Hall, yesterday evening, by Dr. Neild.

COUNTRY NEWS.

MAIL BAG LOST.—On last Saturday evening the mail from Goulburn started from the post-office there with the full complement of mail bags, but on arriving at the Yass post-office the bag containing the Goulburn mail was found to be missing. It had been duly entered on the letter-bill, and the driver recollects receiving it from the post-office authorities. Search has since been made for it, but without success.—Yass Courier.

SALE OF FAT SHEEP.—Messrs. Finlay and Co. submitted to auction, at Tirrana, on Monday last, 1900 fat wethers from the flocks of Mr. W. P. Faithful. These were an exceedingly fine lot, and the whole were purchased by Mr. John O'Donnell at 19s. per head—equal to 21s. in Sydney.—Goulburn Chronicle.

ULLADULLA, AUGUST 15TH.—We have been blessed at last with a few fine days, which were very much required. Good feed for cattle is scarce in this neighbourhood, and if the frosty weather which has set in now continues much longer there will be no feed at all. The roads are in a fearful plight, and the settlers here begin to feel the want of a municipality very much.—Kiama Examiner.

THE OPIUM ROBBERY.—We understand that some clue has been discovered relative to the destination of the two boxes of opium, which were fraudulently obtained from the Royal Hotel, a short time since, by two Chinamen by means of a forged order. On enquiry being made at the booking-office of the Sydney van, at the Black Bull, on Sunday last, it was found that two boxes, entirely corresponding with the description given of the missing property, had been despatched to the metropolis. A telegram was instantly forwarded to Sydney, in order to anticipate their delivery on the following day, and thus, sanguine expectations are entertained that the guilty parties may ultimately be brought to justice.—Bathurst Times.

CARCOAR.—This has been another dry week, no rain having fallen, although at times it has been very gloomy. The farmers' and graziers' position at the present time is very critical, for from the continued absence of rain, and the severe frosts we have had, some of our young wheat is beginning to look very yellow and sickly, and the plough is unable to do any more work through the hardness of the ground. Our lambing season in some establishments has already commenced, while others are about commencing, for which there is scarcely either grass or water at some of the stations; consequently if we do not soon get rain, there will be but a small increase by the lambing and our wheat crop will be an entire failure.—Bathurst Free Press.

HORSE-STEALING.—On Sunday evening last, a horse was stolen from the stables of the old Crimean Hotel. Information was given to the police, who found that the fellow who had thus unceremoniously borrowed the animal, had had the audacity to put him up at Mr. Jones'. The animal was of course secured, and returned to its owner; but the thief had the luck to escape.—Goulburn Herald.

LOWER LACHLAN.—A correspondent, dating the 7th instant, writes as follows:—"The influenza is raging. There is not a station that it has not visited, and left the occupants in bed for a week or more. The diphtheria has also made its appearance amongst us, and has proved fatal in two cases. The weather is delightful, with an occasional shower, enough to make the grass look beautiful. The frontage for about a mile on each side of the road looks bare, on account of so many travelling sheep on the road to Melbourne. I may say they are the curse of the Lachlan. No sooner is there a shoot in the grass, than thousands of them are to be seen wending their way along the river, and trampling it under their feet. It is time there was some new law or road made for travelling sheep. A mob of store cattle, belonging to Mr. John Dargin, passed here a few days ago, returning from Melbourne, where they have been for the last six or seven months, and could not be sold for any reasonable price. It looks very bad for the Melbourne markets.—Bathurst Times.

DARING ROBBERY.—Early on Saturday morning last, four men called at the house of Joseph Dean, limeburner, Bellvue, at the Little Plain, near Yass; three of them entered, and accosting Mrs. Dean (who was the only person on the premises), asked to be supplied with breakfast. She told them she could give them some tea, and that was all; the fourth man, who is described to be of shorter stature than his companions, and very stout made, had a heavy "swag" with him, and kept close to the front of the door. The three men then rummaged the place, and after possessing themselves of a double-barrel fowling piece, a six-barrel revolver, two flasks of powder, and a box of caps, they decamped. While in the hut, the woman remonstrated with them, but was quickly silenced by a threat that if she did not hold her tongue they would shoot her. Immediately after they left, Mrs. Dean started in the direction in which they had gone, and kept in view of them until they reached near to Bowning Hill. On overhearing one of them say to his companion that if they had not got what they went for they would have life, she became alarmed, and returned home. On information of the robbery reaching town, chief constable Enright started off in pursuit. Having proceeded a considerable distance, they made a detour, coming into Binalong, where they met district constable Dillon and two mounted men, who were about to start for Lambing Flat, by order of Mr. Commissioner Beckham. Mr. Enright gave a full description of the robbers to Mr. Dillon, who had not the good luck to fall in with them. The distance travelled was not short of a hundred miles. The robbers are described as short men, one particularly stout. Three of them wore blue shirts, the fourth was in his cotton shirt sleeves; they all had on black California hats.—Yass Courier.

INQUEST AT THE GAOL.—On Sunday last, an inquest was held on the body of John Cutts, a prisoner who had died in the gaol infirmary on the preceding night. It appears from the evidence, that the deceased had been in a wretched state when received into the gaol on the 17th ultimo, and had to be carried from the cart which brought him, to his bed. He had never left his bed since, and on Saturday evening last was seized with convulsions, and died shortly afterwards. The medical evidence proved that the deceased had died a natural death, and the verdict was returned accordingly. The turnkey mentioned that there was a memorandum attached to the warrant, upon which deceased had been received, containing a suggestion from the magistrates that the prisoner should be admitted to the gaol infirmary for medical treatment; and a note was also appended to it, in which Dr. Morgan stated that Cutts had been discharged as incurable from the Gundagai Hospital, on the 8th of July last.—Goulburn Herald.

THE DEPASTURING OF TRAVELLING STOCK.—On this topic, so important to cattle dealers, we quote the following remarks from the Pastoral Times:—The extension of the reserve for depasturing the travelling stock is still exciting attention, especially among our stock agents, who are continually troubled with threats of having their constituent's cattle, sheep, or horses impounded, in the neighbourhood of Deniliquin. We have adverted to the efforts being made to extend the reserve on the south side of the river, by inducing the Government to detach a portion of Mr. James Tyson's run, known as South Deniliquin. We are now credibly informed that several of the large stock agents in Melbourne purpose joining together with the view of renting South Deniliquin from Mr. Tyson, and that they have offered him £600 per annum for the run. The agents, who have representatives in Deniliquin, intend, of course, to charge some small sum per head for the cattle and sheep of their constituents, in order to meet the rent purposed to be given to Mr. Tyson. There is some reason in this movement, and we should think that Mr. Tyson would feel disposed to come to terms with the stock agents. Another plan proposed is to memorialise the Government to buy out Mr. Tyson, and the Government to charge a fixed sum per head to owners of travelling stock for the use of his station. We cannot see the practicability of this latter movement, inasmuch as the Government has not, that we are aware of, the power to comply with the prayer of the memorialists. The delay would be of considerable duration even if the Government possessed the power of treating with Mr. Tyson, because the sum necessary to buy him out would have to undergo the ordeal of passing the Sydney Assembly, having first been placed on the Estimates. We have strong doubts as to whether the Government would entertain the proposal at all, as there does not exist a precedent that we know, and the ruling powers are not very anxious to multiply their offices; if, therefore, the work is to be done, it would seem a more simple plan for the stock agents to deal with Mr. Tyson than to go the round about way referred to. It is of the greatest importance to this, the highway for cattle travelling between New South Wales and Victoria, that there should be a considerable depot for travelling stock at Deniliquin, independent of the reserve, and that persons in charge of stock should not be molested while within reasonable bounds, but we can never sanction the practice followed by some travellers, who go to the centre of the squatters's runs with large mobs of cattle or thousands of sheep. It is to be hoped that steps will soon be taken by the New South Wales Government to extend the limit for travelling stock to half a mile on each side of the public roads. This is the case in Victoria, and it is absolutely necessary in the sister colony. Parties driving stock would then have a mile in breadth, which would be no more than is reasonable, and they could not justly complain of being informed against if they transgressed the law.

STOCK AND SHARE LIST.

[BARTON AND SON.]

ENQUIRY for remunerative investment continues, but we cannot report any improvement in prices except in the shares of the Australasian Steam Navigation Company, which have advanced 20s per share from last quotations.

Our sales this week have been in—
New South Wales Bank shares, at £36.
Australasian Steam shares, at £17.
New South Wales Government debentures, interminable, 98 per cent., and interest added to day of sale.
Loans upon the security of shares and real estate are negotiated at from 7 to 10 per cent. per annum.

☞ The share list, with full information, may be obtained at our office, in George-street, next the Commercial Bank.

24th August, 1860.

[LENNON AND CAPE.]

We have more enquiry for the shares of our different banking companies during the past week, but cannot report any actual sales. Steam shares continue in favour, and we report having sold a good amount of stock in the Clarence and Richmond and Illawarra Steam Navigation Companies, at under noted prices. The Australian Gas Company, at their half-yearly meeting, on Wednesday, declared the usual dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, with bonus of 2s. per share, and made a third call of £1 per share on the new shares, payable on or before the 15th October next. Our sales during the week have been confined to—

Clarence and Richmond Steam Navigation Company, at £10 10s.
Illawarra Steam Navigation Company, £5.
Australian Gas Light Company, £12 ex dividend.

DEBENTURES:

New South Wales Government, redeemable in London September '66, at 101 and interest.

N.B.—The share list, with full particulars, can be obtained on application to our office, 136, Terry's-buildings, Pitt-street. Sydney, 24th August.

[J. MULLINS.]

The share market has remained without much change since the departure of the mail, and transactions have been of moderate amount. I have made several sales of Bank of New South Wales stock at the lower rate of £36, but have done no business in the shares of the other banks.

The Gas Light Company held their half-yearly meeting this week, and declared the usual dividend of 15 per cent. per annum. It was also determined to make a further call of £1 on the new shares, in consequence of the extension of the Company's operations. There is a considerable demand for these shares, but very few are in the market for sale.

My sales during the week have been:—
Bank of New South Wales shares, at £36.
Illawarra Steam Company shares, at £4 18s 9d.
Wallsend Coal Company shares, 5 per cent. discount.

The share list, with details, may be obtained at my office, 18, Hunter-street.

Sydney, 24th August.

STOCK AND STATION CIRCULARS.

[RAYMOND AND CO.]

FAT CATTLE.—Only one lot of any consequence has been offered during the week, which was sold at from £5 to £9 6s, the latter weighing 800 lbs.

FAT SHEEP.—A good market at present for really prime—quotations this week, first quality, from 18s to 21s; second ditto, 15s to 16s 6d.

STORE CATTLE.—Very little doing, though prices still remain firm. We quote well bred store cattle, delivered on the station, from 40s to 45s.; all bullocks 50s. Our advices from Deniliquin quote, first class store cattle, 60s to 65s; all bullocks 75s to 80s.

STORE SHEEP.—The only demand now is for delivery after shearing, for which prices are nominal, according to ages and breed. First class store wethers are sought after to proceed to the southward; we quote them from 11s 6d to 13s.

STATIONS.—Very little doing, no sales to report this week, we do not anticipate any business of consequence till after shearing.

HORSES.—This market very bare of useful stock. Prices very firm, and every description suitable for draught purposes looking up.

WOOL.—The wool market, for the little that has been sold, continues very firm at last week's quotations.

TALLOW.—The tallow market has been more active this last week than for some time past. The trade, showing a better disposition to purchase, a large quantity has been offered, most of which has been quitted at prices fully equal to those ruling last week. We quote mutton, for town use, £34 to £48; beef, for shipment, £37 to £41; station tallow, £36 to £41.

HIDES.—Not such prime heavy offering this week, the best shipping sold for 15s. 6d.; light and inferior, unsaleable. We quote them 5s. to 15s. 6d.

Treasury Buildings, 24th August.

[MR BREWSTER.]

STATIONS.—There is very little doing, although there are enquiries for sheep stations in the North. The only sale I have to report is that of eight unoccupied blocks on the Upper Dawson, at £125 (one hundred and twenty-five pounds) per block.

STORE CATTLE.—The demand is unusually dull; the unfavourable accounts from Victoria and the difficulty of effecting sales there, together with the long credit demanded, deters parties from entering into any fresh speculations until there is some improvement in the Southern markets. Prices unaltered.

STORE SHEEP.—There is little doing in this description of stock, both ewes and wethers are in demand for delivery after shearing, but still the demand is far from brisk, and but little business will be done until after shearing, as holders are very stiff in their prices.

FAT STOCK.—There is no improvement to notice in the quality of either the cattle or sheep arriving. Best bullocks would realize £7 per head, and prime wethers 17s to 18s.

Sydney, 24th August.

[MR. THOMAS DAWSON.]

FAT CATTLE.—Prime quality scarce, and may be quoted at fully 20s. to 22s 6d per 100 lbs—in fact, we have not had so good a market for many months.

FAT SHEEP in good demand, with short supply; prices firm, at last week's quotations, as few flocks are reported on the road.

PRIME WETHERS, 20s per head.

STORE CATTLE.—I have had a few enquiries for this description of stock during the week, to be delivered early in spring.

STORE SHEEP.—Several enquiries for wethers, but little or nothing will be done till after shearing.

HORSES.—This market is still bare of good useful stock.

WORKING BULLOCKS have been enquired for, and I could place a few good teams at remunerative prices.

WEEKLY PRODUCE SALE, Railway Terminus, was rather scantily supplied. Prices may be quoted as follows:—Fat calves 40s and upwards, keg butter 12d to 13½d per lb, eggs 9½d to 13d per dozen, cheese 8d per lb, pork 4½d to 6 per lb.

August 24.

[R. FORBES.]

STATIONS.—Large stations in our Western and Southern districts are under offer.

FAT CATTLE.—Prime bullocks command 20s to 25s per 100 lbs. All good cattle are limited in number, and any choice will this day command £6 10s to £7; second quality are worth £3 10s to £5, with few here.

FAT SHEEP.—Very scarce, and few on the road. Wethers weighing 50 lbs. are worth 17s; heavier, 18s to 20s each. Ewes will bring in good condition 13s to 15s.

STORE CATTLE.—I have quitted 1500 sexes, half-and-half, to be delivered end of September, ages three to seven, at 44s per head; delivery taken on the station. The Port Phillip market is very bad, hence the light demand.

STORE SHEEP.—Wethers and ewes after shearing are worth 11s to 12s. All sorts in demand.

PRODUCE CIRCULARS.

WOOL.—The catalogue comprised only two lots worth particular mention, namely, 44 bales of Victorian wool in the grease, which had been previously offered and bought in; one lot realising 13d per lb., the other 11½d per lb.

SHEEPSKINS are plentiful, and have realised full prices.

TALLOW.—The quantity offered was mostly sold, the trade buying more freely than for some weeks past, but without any advance in price to note.

HIDES.—Best heavy have sold up to 15s 6d, but for superior station, and light weights, there is little or no demand.

FAT CATTLE.—The supply known to be on the road is quite up to the requirements of the trade, and the prices of last week are not likely to be exceeded.

FAT SHEEP.—Prime are worth 16s to 17s 6d, but the trade have all on the road in their hands, purchased to arrive.

[DURHAM AND IRWIN.]

WOOL.—The market continues inactive, and as the quantity coming to hand is limited, the prices obtained cannot be such as would fix quotations, which can only at the present time be reported as nominal. Sundry odd packages were disposed of this day, as follows:—DG, 1 bale locks, at 8½d; ditto, 1 pocket sweepings, at 4½d; TC, 1 ditto skin, at 18½d; D&B, 1 ditto locks, at 9d per pound.

SHEEPSKINS.—There is a good demand for clean full-fleeced parcels, which is likely to continue until the new clip begins to appear; about 1800 were sold this day, as follows:—1 lot at 7¼d; DG, 1 lot at 8½d; SP, 24 bundles at 8½d; SJ, 1 lot at 9d, JC, 1 lot at 7½d, 1 lot at 8d per lb, 1 lot (green) at 4s 6d; SJ, 1 lot (ditto) at 4s 6d per skin.

TALLOW.—The supply being in excess of the requirements of the trade—who are only purchasing to supply their immediate wants—has caused a slight depression in this article during the present week. 71 casks were catalogued, of which 31 were sold privately—thus AT, 10 cask (beef) at 42s, 7 casks (ditto) at 41s 9d; WX, 14 casks at 41s 9d per cwt.

HIDES.—The continued high rate of tonnage, together with the decline in the home market, has caused prices to recede, which may be quoted 1s per hide lower than last week; those offered this day, were sold as follows:—56 at 15s 6d, 11 at 10s, 3 at 6s 6d, 6 at 12s 3d, 25 at 11s; calfskins, 2 at 2s 9d; horns, 1 lot at 20 3d, 1 ditto at 18s 9d per 100; shankbones, 1 lot at £9 2s 6d.

August 24th.

LABOUR MARKET.

[HAIGH AND BROWN.]

GREATER activity prevails in our market, which is well supplied with labour. Our engagements during the week have been numerous, at the current rate of wages, with shepherds for Queensland, farm and domestic servants, &c., for town and country. We have still shepherding families in attendance, anxious for employment, and several of the immigrants who arrived last week, by the Tudor. There is good demand for female servants, especially from the country. Wages remain as per last quotations, with board and lodging, or hut room and rations, viz.:—Married couples, perannum, £45 to £60; farm labourers, £30 to £35; grooms and coachmen, £35 to £50; cook, £40 to £60; garden labourers, £35 to £40; blacksmiths, £60 to £80; carpenters, £53 to £80; shepherds, £26 to £30; ditto shepherd and watch, £35; general female servants, £20 to £26.

Sydney, 24th August.

[SPENCER AND ASHLIN.]

The immigrants per Tudor have been offering for hire during the week. The majority consist of married couples and single men from Ireland. Any suitable for agricultural labour found ready engagements at £30 to £35 per annum; married, without encumbrance, £50 to £60, up to £80 with grown sons fit for shepherding. Quotations:—Married couples, £50 to £80; single ploughmen, £30 to £36; farm labourers, £28 to £32; groom and gardeners, £35 to £60; bushmen and rough carpenters, £40 to £45; single shepherds, £25 to £30; shepherds and families, £50 to £70; blacksmiths and wheelwrights, £65 to £80; men cooks and waiters, £40 to £70; female servants, £21 to £30.

HORSE MARKET.

MR. CHARLES MARTYN reports there has been an active demand for useful horses throughout the past week, and fresh country lots, together with a large number of horses that have been in the market for some time, were disposed of at capital prices. The market is now cleared of good horses. Heavy draught sell readily at from £30 to £40; medium ditto, from £15 to £25. First-class gig and carriage horses cannot be obtained; they will, however, command good prices, and are much asked for. Ordinary saddle horses are fetching £10 upwards; but sound showy animals will realise high figures.

Messrs. BURT and Co. notice a brisker market since last report; Demands are large, and strong horses sell without difficulty; heavy draughts are inquired for, and have gone as high as £45. Some harness horses, from Kiama and Shellharbour, on Wednesday, realised from £18 to £42. On Friday three different country-lots were cleared off, hackneys going from £12 to £23, light harness horses £16 to £27, heavy draught £35 to £37. The market is still overstocked with a large number of poor and inferior horses.

SYDNEY MARKETS.—FRIDAY.

MAITLAND STATION AND STOCK REPORT.

MAITLAND MARKETS.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

FRIDAY MORNING, AUGUST 24.—The fine weather which has prevailed here the last fortnight, has dried up our streets, and rendered the approaches to the town passable, which has tended to make business generally brisk during the past week. Some houses, however, are still complaining of the dullness of trade. There are no articles of consumption in particular demand. Tea continues firm, and coffee scarce. Rock salt, as stated in last report, is scarcely to be obtained.

Flour.—The large importations to Melbourne and Sydney have had the effect of giving a downward tendency to flour, but no alteration in price has yet taken place, the holders having purchased wheat at a high figure. However, a fall is anticipated shortly. There is a good local demand at £22 10s to £25 wholesale for fine, and 25s to 28s per 100 lbs. fine, and 23s to 24s per 100 lbs. seconds.

Bread, 6d the 2 lb. loaf.

Wheat.—There has been a little wheat offered this week of good quality, which found a sale at 8s 9d per bushel. The small quantity of wheat now remaining in the district north of Maitland is said to find a ready sale at the Black Creek mill at a more remunerative figure.

Maize.—The improved state of the roads has enabled the settlers to bring in a good supply of maize, and some large transaction have taken place at 2s 6d per bushel. The retail quotation is 3s to 3s 6d per bushel.

Bran is quoted at from £4 15s to £5 per ton, exclusive of bags.

Hay is in fair demand—lucerne at £3 per ton for good quality, pressed and in good shipping condition, and oaten at from £4 to £6 per ton. Green barley 8d to 9d per dozen bundles wholesale—retail 1s, or 1d per bundle.

Barley.—English in demand at 2s 4d to 2s 7d per bushel. Cape unsaleable.

Tallow is quoted at 36s to 40s per cwt. wholesale, soap 36s per cwt., candles 7d per lb. wholesale—retail 8d.

Leather Market.—Maitland sole leather is quoted at from 1s to 1s 2d per lb., Sydney sole leather from 1s 2d to 1s 4d, Maitland kip 2s, basils 12s to 15s per dozen, harness leather from 14d to 16d per lb., calfskins (French) from 5s to 6s 6d per lb., colonial ditto 3s 6d to 5s.

Live Stock.—Porkers (up to about 120lbs. weight) 4½d to 5d per lb.

Butchers' Meat.—Beef is quoted at 16s 8d per 100lbs., retail 3d per lb.; mutton £1 9s 2d per 100lbs., retail 5d per lb.; veal 5d per lb.; lamb (perquarter) wholesale and retail 4s 6d; pork 5d per lb. wholesale, retail 8d.

Colonial tobacco is quoted at 1s 3d per lb. wholesale, retail 1s 6d; colonial jam 1s per lb. wholesale, retail 1s 3d; honey 4d to 5d per lb. wholesale, retail 7d to 8d; beeswax 8d per lb. wholesale, retail 1s.

Millet brooms (round) 9s per dozen wholesale, retail 1s each; ditto ditto (flat) from 14s to 18s per dozen wholesale, retail from 1s 6d to 2s each.

Farm and Dairy Produce.—Bacon and ham 5d to 6d per lb. wholesale, retail 9d to 1s; cheese 5d to 6d per lb. wholesale, retail 8d to 10d for good samples, inferior no sale; butter (more plentiful) 1s 6d per lb. wholesale, retail 2s; salt butter 1s per lb. wholesale, retail 1s 3d for good samples; lard, 6d to 7d per lb. wholesale, retail 8d to 1s, according to quality; milk, 4d per quart.

Tallow and Hides.—Much about the same as last week.

DENILIQUIN STOCK MARKET.

Friday morning, August 17.

THERE are few inquiries here respecting fat cattle, although two or three mobs have changed hands on the road from hence to the Victorian markets. Station-holders do not feel inclined to part with fat cattle—really good cattle—at a less price than was mentioned in our last. The country around is beginning to suffer from the want of rain, and many of our settlers are awaiting the result of the weather. The runs are pretty well cleared of first-rate stock, and the general impression here is that prime cattle will soon be scarce. We have for some time past reported that our station-holders were thinking of substituting cattle for sheep, and that Victoria cannot expect the same amount of good beef from these districts.

The following are the return of the cattle which have left us during the last few days:—216, Morgan and M'Intosh (Warbreccan); 200, Sweeney (DeSailly); 160, (Ashcroft); 240, (Rickettson); or 816 in all.

Of sales we have only to report 500 store by Mackenzie, Brothers, at £3.

Our sheep returns are very meagre. 1409 of Mr. Broughton's and 2000 of Messrs. Clarke and M'Leay are the only flocks that have crossed since our last.

Of horses we have nothing to report. On the whole prices for stock may be said to be firm here.

We hear that the biddings for Maiden's stations only reached £7 15s. They were consequently withdrawn.—Pastoral Times.

CARCOAR.—The yield of gold at our diggings continues about the same. There has been a far greater number of diggers passing through our town this week for the Snowy than during any previous week, some of them having their wives and children with them.—Bathurst Times.

THE VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT.

A PUBLIC meeting was held last evening at the Royal Oak, Paddington, for the purpose of taking the necessary steps for the formation of a Volunteer Corps in that Municipality.

Mr. W. PERRY, chairman of the Municipality was called upon to preside. The meeting was remarkably well attended, the room being crowded to excess.

The CHAIRMAN opened the proceedings by reading the requisition and reply calling the meeting; and briefly stated his hearty concurrence with the object of the meeting.

Mr. T. BROUGHTON, M.L.A., in moving the first resolution, dwelt upon the necessity of defending themselves, since England expected as much from them. A volunteer force had formerly been enrolled, but gradually died off from the neglect of the Government and the Legislature, who were so niggardly that they would not even supply ammunition. The only thing, in fact, that the Government provided was a musket, and that only of a very common description. A different state of things now existed, and no doubt the Government would see the importance of this movement, if it were only from looking at what a similar force had done in New Zealand lately. He looked upon it almost as a disgrace to this colony, that no volunteer force existed in it; but it was from no fault of the people themselves that such was the case, for the fault lay entirely with their rulers. Things would be different now, and he would recommend those about to establish this volunteer corps not to be too aristocratic, for it was the man of the hard hand and the strong arm that invariably made the best soldier. In Paddington there were very many of this class, besides a large number of young men, who would be of vast importance to any future force; and they must be all put upon the same footing, for, as soldiers, they would all rank alike. It would perhaps be desirable if the committee about to be appointed would get the inhabitants of Waverley and the Surry Hills to join them, as it was not advisable to have too many small corps scattered over the country; besides this such corps would have the advantage of training in the barrack grounds, instead of in the Domain as formerly, thus escaping the ridicule that the first efforts at training were sure to bring down upon them. He had heard it said that in this country there was nothing to fight for; but surely, as Britons they must feel that even if they had nothing else,—if they had neither parent, wife, child or relative—still they had the honour of the country to defend; and he had no doubt but that it was a feeling of this kind that actuated the young men who had put themselves most prominently forward in the present movement. In conclusion, he would remark that it might possibly happen that subscriptions would be required in support of the movement, in order that those who could not afford to lose their time, might be paid for such time as would have to be given up for drill. In this, as in all else, he was prepared to give his hearty co-operation to the movement. He begged to move

That in the opinion of this meeting, looking at the present unsettled state of Europe, and the growing importance of this colony, it is incumbent upon us as a people, to arm ourselves, in order that we may be able to meet any hostile invasion.

Mr. DEAN seconded the resolution. All those now listening to him were either Britons or Australians, and regarding them in that light, he contended that it was their first and most imperative duty to defend their adopted country.

The resolution was put and carried unanimously.

A Mr. ROBERTS here came forward and asked what would be done for the widows and children of such volunteers as might be shot; and what for themselves in case of their being wounded. He would not like to see the young men of the colony walking about the streets minus an arm, or with a wooden leg. Here a gentlemen in the body of the meeting informed Mr. Roberts that it was better to see men with wooden legs than with wooden heads. This sally was received with general laughter, amidst which Mr. Roberts quietly hid himself in the crowd.

Mr. S. LYONS, M. L. A., expressed his satisfaction at seeing such a meeting as that which he had the honour of addressing, as it showed them to be in earnest in what they were doing; and he had no doubt that, if the arrangements for forming the corps were such as had been recommended, that was that they should be such as to make the corps comprise members of every class in the community, Paddington would have one of the most effective bodies of volunteers in the colony, from the advantage it possessed of being so near the military barracks. He begged to move

That the most effective way to meet such an invasion, is to organise volunteer corps throughout the colony, and that as Paddington is a suburb peculiarly adapted for the organisation of such a corps from its proximity to the barracks, &c., this meeting resolves that a volunteer corps be at once formed, to be called the Paddington Rifle Corps.

Mr. BLUMER seconded the resolution, dwelling upon the absolute necessity for taking some steps for defending themselves at the present juncture.

The resolution was put and carried.

Mr. JOHNSON, in moving the third resolution, said that the whole continent of Europe was in one general state of ferment, and this would not cease until after one general outburst had been made for the liberty of Italy. Such being the case, and war being so imminent, it would be an absolute disgrace to a colony like this if it were to rest idle, in a state of slavish security, until an invading foe landed upon their shores and deprived them of their liberty. It had been said they had nothing to fight for; but he could not understand how any Briton could make such a remark. Would their position be at all bettered if this colony were under French domination? In that case, what would become of that greatest and best liberty they now possessed—the liberty of the Press? Why, it would be shackled, if not crushed, under the iron heel of despotism. To any Englishman accustomed to enjoy this great blessing, he would conceive that there would be quite inducement enough to fight, even if he had to fight for nothing more than the liberty of the Press. But, beyond this, there were his family and his home to fight for; and it was well known that the home of the Briton had been, as it always should be respected, to whatever part of the world he went. It was this sturdy and unflinching defence of his home that had caused Britons to be looked upon with respect wherever they went. He called upon them to show themselves worthy of the country that gave them birth, and not to be deterred by any sarcasms that might be levelled at them in the first instance, as it was well known that everything must have a beginning, and that the beginnings of even the greatest movements that have shaken empires had in the first instance been small, and generally been laughed at. He begged to move—

That the following gentlemen, with power to add to their number, form a committee to secure the formation of the corps, and wait upon his Excellency and tender the services of the company:—Messrs. Perry, Broughton, Lyons, Blumer, W. Cowlishaw, R. Sterling.

Mr. W. COWLISHAW seconded the resolution, and informed those present that they might very materially assist the committee here nominated by co-operating with them, and by sending in the names of such persons as were inclined to join. (A voice: "Who is to find the clothes?") He believed, from the Governor-General's reply the deputation that had waited on him upon this subject, that an application would be made to Parliament for the necessary funds for fully equipping the volunteers; but even if this were not the case, he believed that there was patriotism enough amongst the young men of the colony not to allow them to begrudge the expense that would be entailed in so noble and good a cause as that of the defence of their country and the security of the rights and liberties they now so happily enjoyed.

The resolution was then put and carried.

A vote of thanks to the chairman was moved by Mr. BROUGHTON, seconded by Mr. JONES, and carried by acclamation, and the meeting separated.

SYDNEY VOLUNTEER RIFLE CORPS.—A few days ago a number of gentlemen met in a room over the business premises of Mr. Aldis, in George-street, to take into consideration the practicability of forming in this city a company of volunteer riflemen. They did not make their intention publicly known, because, in the first instance, they wished to obtain some assurance of ultimate success; their desire being not to create an exclusive corps for the mere purpose of review, but to form an open and powerful military company for the defence of the country in the hour of need. Having come to the conclusion that there was reasonable probability of attaining their object, each consented to take a list and perform the duties of recruiting officer. They met again yesterday to report progress, and Mr. W. C. Windeyer, M.L.A., took the chair. The lists returned showed that the promoters were in earnest, nearly one hundred and forty names having been collected in a day. Mr. C. Wilson then moved: "That the following gentlemen be a committee to arrange for the first meeting in the Domain, and presenting the list to the hon. the Colonial Secretary, with a view to the immediate organisation of the corps, viz.: Mr. W. C. Windeyer, M.L.A.; Mr. J. R. Fairfax, Mr. W. Hartottle, Mr. A. G. M'Lean, Mr. E. W. Eastwood, Mr. W. Forde, Mr. W. C. Still, and Sergeant Baynes." This resolution was seconded by Mr. A. M'Lean, and carried unanimously. It was stated at the meeting that the officers of the old rifle volunteer force had resigned their commissions, expressing a desire, however, to join any new corps of a similar character which may be formed. This will remove an obstacle which might perhaps otherwise have been in the way, because it is intended that the new corps shall frame its own rules and select its own officers. It was also suggested that the former Sydney Volunteer riflemen should be considered as a still-existing corps, with which the new force might amalgamate, commencing de novo. The lists will remain open, and those who desire to enrol may do so at the Sydney Exchange, the School of Arts, and other public places.

Agreeably to advertisement, a meeting took place at the Farrier's Arms, George-street, for the purpose of taking into consideration the necessity of forming a company of Volunteer Rifles for the protection of our adopted country. The chair was taken by Mr. Morris, who read the advertisement, when Mr. Phipps proposed the first resolution, which was seconded by Mr. Partridge: "That, in the opinion of this meeting, considering the present undefended state of Sydney and the colony generally, and the probability of Great Britain being involved in a war, it is desirable that immediate steps be taken for the purpose of organising a body of volunteer riflemen, for the defence of the city and colony. That we the undersigned (present) do form ourselves into a committee, with power to add to their number, for the purpose of receiving the names of gentlemen willing to enrol themselves." A committee was then formed for the purpose of carrying out the foregoing propositions.

Mr. R. Forbes reports having sold the following houses belonging to Mr. J. Simmons, situated in George-street, and tenanted by Messrs. Hogarth and Erichsen, jewellers; Mr. Beckman, jeweller, and Mr. Smith, hatter, for £10,000 cash. Mr. W. Nash was the purchaser.

Messrs. Durham and Irwin held their weekly produce sale this day. The quantity of wool sold was small, and the prices obtained were thus: Skin, at 18½d.; locks, at from 8¾d. to 9d. Sheepskins: Those sold this day were above the average quality, and were placed at from 7½d to 9d. per lb.; two lots of green skins were sold at 4s. 6d. per skin. Tallow: 71 casks were catalogued; the only lots sold were taken (privately) for one of the neighbouring colonies at from £41 15s. to £42 per ton. Hides: The prices obtained this week were not up to those last week. The highest price obtained at auction this day, was 15s. 6d.; prices ranged from 6s. 6d. to 15s. 6d. Calfskins, 2s. 9d. each. Horns, from 18s. 9d. to 20s. 3d. per 100. Shankbones, at £9 2s. 6d. per ton.

Business in the early part of the week was rather brisk, but during the last few days great inactivity has prevailed, and purchases have only been made to meet present requirements. The returns from the Kiandra gold-fields are very satisfactory, considering the weather, and as the population is daily increasing there must soon be a considerable demand for all descriptions of goods.

FLOUR.—The market is very dull, and prices have again declined £2 per ton. The millers quote fine flour £21; seconds £19. Wheat is nominal, and the last cargo that arrived is to be stored for the present, as the offers made for it do not come up to the anticipations of the holders.

In liquids we have no alteration to notice in the rates ruling on brandy, rum, geneva, and wines, and transactions have been very limited.

SUGARS.—The market is firm, and prices have an upward tendency. The greater portion of the cargo of Mauritius sugars, ex Faerie Queen, was sold by auction on Tuesday by Messrs. W. Dean and Co., and the following rates were obtained: Ration sugars £28 to £34 5s., counters £35 7s. 6d. to £38 17s. 6d., yellow crystals £40 10s. to £41 19s. The same firm also reports having nearly cleared the balance of the cargo by private sale, at advanced rates on the prices realized by auction.

ANOTHER GROSS FRAUD.—Two cases were landed from the Neptune, on Wednesday, and conveyed to the stores of Messrs. Frith and Payten. They were consigned by Mr. H. Nathan, London, to Mr. Lipman, and marked Q No. 7 and 8, valued by invoice at £80, purporting to contain forty kips of chamois skins in each case. The cases were opened in the presence of Messrs. Frith and Payten, Captain Varey, of the Neptune, and Mr. Glassford, and were found to be filled with stones, straw, and pieces of newspaper.

PARRAMATTA.—FAT BEEF.—Mr. R. Harper, butcher, Church-street, is now exhibiting one of the finest heifers that has been seen for a considerable time. It was bred by Mr. A. J. Doyle, Maitland, and carried the prize at the Maitland Cattle Show.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE AND TRADE.—The official designation of Henry Lane, Esq., has been altered from Secretary to the Treasury, as notified in Government Gazette No. 148, of 30th September, 1856, to that of Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

WOOLCOTT, Esq., Town Hall, until WEDNESDAY next, the 29th instant, at noon, for cutting, felling and turfing on the Gymnasium Ground, Upper Domain Gate, near Hyde Park, as per plan, to be seen at the above office. The committee do not bind themselves to accept the lowest, or any tender. W. M'DONELL, honorary secretary.

TO THE INHABITANTS of South Head Road, Surry Hills, Paddington, Waverley, and the general public.—ALEXANDER GRANT, General Draper and Outfitter, Iron Emporium, 141, South Head Road, begs most respectfully to inform private families and the public generally that he has, in connection with his business as a general draper and outfitter, opened a BOOT and SHOE ROOM, under the superintendence of Mr. Daniel M'Clennan, for some years in the employment of Mr. T. All goods purchased at this establishment if found unsatisfactory, will be exchanged, or cash returned.

Civility and courtesy to all and a personal call and inspection respectfully invited.

GRATIS and CORONATION.

BURT and CO. are instructed by J. J. Roberts, Esq., of Goulburn, to sell by auction, at their Bazaar, Pitt and Castlereagh streets, on MONDAY, the 3rd September, at 12 o'clock,

The well-known race horse GRATIS, Bay Gelding, by Sir Charles, out of Young Moonshine, by Sir Hercules, out of Old Moonshine, by Theorem, out of Moonshine. Sir Charles by Gratis, out of Lorina, imported, by Smolensko, out of Hoity Toity. Gratis (imported in 1835) by Lanios, by Gohanna, out of Carthia, by Woodpecker.

GRATIS has been so constantly before the public during the last three years, that little can be said to add to his well-earned reputation of being the gamest horse now on the turf.

His performances are far too numerous to publish in detail. It is sufficient, however, to say that a perusal of BELL'S LIFE of the 28th of July will show that he has constantly met large fields at all weights and distances, and amongst the many cracks he has vanquished may be named, Lauristina (1¼ miles in 2 minutes 54 seconds), Rajah, Zoe, Dora, Zingara, Chevalier (match for £300 a-side), Strop, and Veno, honours that no other horse of the present day can boast of. Gratis has accepted for the Champion Stakes on the 1st September, and will be entered for several other events at the spring meeting following. He is now in the hands of Higgerson, who will satisfy intending purchasers as to the horse, sound, good health, and excellent constitution.

Coronation is a chesnut horse, 5 years old, about 15½ hands high, got by Nimrod out of Bee-in-a-Bonnet, by St. John, imported, out of Spaewife, imported, Nimrod, out of Miss Hurley by Sir Charles.

Coronation shews a great amount of fashion and quality, and would be invaluable in any stud requiring a change of blood. He is in fine condition, and may be seen at the Bazaar in a few days.

The house is built of stone, with shingled roof, and contains front verandah, entrance hall, dining and drawing rooms, library, and nursery, all spacious apartments, on the ground floor; and seven bedrooms on the first floor.

Attached to the house, at the rear, are kitchen, laundry, store and pantry, built of brick. There are also a two-stall stable and coachhouse, large shed, and other out offices.

They are in the market for bona fide sale.

Plan on view at the Rooms.

STONEHENGE, NEW ENGLAND.

HOMESTEAD and 41 ACRES OF LAND.
Title unquestionable. Terms at Sale.

MORT and CO. have received instructions to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, at 11 o'clock, on WEDNESDAY, 12th September,

A compact farm, with frontage to the Stonehenge Creek, situate at STONEHENGE, in the district of New England, about TEN miles from DUNDEE, and fifty miles from ARMIDALE, containing 41 acres of first-class agricultural land, perfectly free of timber and rocks, and now fit for the plough. About 16 acres have been securely fenced in for cultivation, 10 acres of which are now under wheat. The whole 41 acres are fenced in with a good two-rail split fence, with the exception of the half of one side (to be fenced in by the adjoining proprietor). There is also a hut erected on the other side of the creek, which will be sold with the land.

☞ To any industrious man who is anxious to secure a comfortable independence a chance is now presented of doing so. The climate, well known as resembling that of the mother country, is healthy beyond description; the soil is all that could be desired, rendering a most abundant return for any labour bestowed; and last, though not the least, the price for produce is always most remunerative.

 A team of working bullocks, with gear complete, accustomed to plough and used to the place, two ploughs, harrow, and bush tools, sawn timber, furniture, &c., to be taken at a valuation.

THOSE FIRST-CLASS FATTENING RUNS,
Situate in the Warregal District, on the LOWER BARWIN RIVER, distant about 30 MILES FROM FORT BOURKE, and known as BUNNAWANNAH TUREE, and BUNNAWANNAH WEST TUREE UPPER.
And with which will be sold
4000 HEAD OF CHOICE CATTLE, more or less, now depasturing thereon.

Terms — One-third cash deposit, residue by bills at 6, 12, and 18 months, secured upon the stock and stations.

MORT and CO. have been instructed to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, at 11 o'clock, on TUESDAY, 2nd October,

That magnificent cattle property the BUNNAWANNAH RUNS, comprising Bunnawannah, Bunnawannah West, Turee, and Turee Upper, on the Lower Barwin River.

These splendid runs are surrounded by the stations of the Bogan River Company, and Messrs. Sharp and George Loder (late Druitt's), and are distant only about 30 miles from Fort Bourke. They have UPWARDS OF 20 MILES FRONTAGE to the LOWER BARWIN, and the back country is also abundantly watered by creeks and lagoons in every direction. As FATTENING RUNS, they rank among THE VERY FIRST, abounding in richly grassed country. As a proof of this, it may be mentioned that there will shortly be 1000 HEAD OF FAT CATTLE ON THE RUNS.

THE IMPROVEMENTS comprise a dwelling of four-rooms and verandah; four-stall stable and cart shed, with small yard attached; stockyard, horseyard, and milking yard, fitted with bails, calf-pen, &c.

With the Bunnawannah Runs, will be sold 4000 HEAD of CATTLE now depasturing thereon, consisting principally of cows and heifers, and very few over four YEARS OLD.

 These cattle were most carefully selected from some of the choicest and largest herds in New South Wales, a fact which will fully justify their being described as one of THE FINEST HERDS IN THE COLONY.

 20 Stock horses, stores, implements, drays, &c., to be taken at a valuation.

☞ Mort and Co., would beg to direct attention to the above, as one of the finest cattle properties that has been in the market for some time past.

From its position it commands the ADELAIDE and VICTORIA MARKETS as well as that of NEW SOUTH WALES.

The opening up of the navigation of the Murray and Darling Rivers has given to the pastoral properties in this neighbourhood a value which they could not have derived from any other source. This fact is fully borne out by the rapidity with which the whole of the country in this and adjoining districts has been taken up; the very HIGH PRICES to which the stations have attained, as well as the public attention they have attracted.

THE ADELAIDE STEAMER has landed cargo at these stations, so that they enjoy all the ADVANTAGES OF WATER TRANSIT.

The mail also passes through them, giving them the great additional benefit of regular postal communication.

With reference to the stock it has already been stated that they were selected from first-class herds of vast extent; since when they have been well managed and are very quiet.

MORT and CO. will leave all these facts to speak for themselves. They are more than sufficient to satisfy any practical man of the value of the property, and to secure for the sale that attention on the part of the squatting interest to which it is fully entitled.

BY ORDER OF THE MORTGAGEE.

HOUSE AND SHOP, SOUTH HEAD ROAD.

Title unquestionable.—Terms at sale.

MORT and CO. have received instructions to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, at 11 o'clock, on WEDNESDAY, 26th September,

☞ This property, situate in one of the most thriving thoroughfares in the city, and in a position where tenants are always to be had, is in the market for bona fide sale, and to any one in search of an investment where a safe income may be relied upon, it is an opportunity not to be lost. It is sufficient to remind the public that in no part of the city has property declined in value less than on the South Head Road, and it is but seldom that a property in this locality can be obtained.

THREE CHOICE SITES, having each about 24 feet frontage to DOWLING-STREET, adjoining the above, and extending 118 feet back to DARLINGHURST-STREET, a continuation of Macleay-street.

Title—the well-known Riley Estate title.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions from James Curtis, Esq. (in consequence of his leaving Sydney for the country), to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Bank-buildings, George-street, on MONDAY, 10th September, at 11 o'clock,

The whole of this gentleman's well-known property, situate in DOWLING-STREET, DARLINGHURST, subdivided into the following lots:—

EAST VIEW HOUSE—No. 308, Dowling-street, a FIRST-CLASS CITY RESIDENCE, built of brick, on stone foundation, cemented and oil painted, containing, ON THE GROUND FLOOR, verandah, hall, dining room, parlour, kitchen with range complete, and servants' room; ON THE FIRST FLOOR, drawing-room, large bedroom, and wide balcony; ATTIC FLOOR, three comfortable bedrooms; BASEMENT, laundry, with copper stoves, cellars, &c.

The whole occupies a block of land, having frontages of about

34 feet to Dowling-street,
34 feet to Darlinghurst Road,

Every convenience that a family could desire is to be found in the arrangement of the house, while at the same time, in respect of style and finish, it will bear favourable comparison with any residence in this well-known locality in the city.

The position is truly beautiful, being the highest elevation in this favourite locality, and one eagerly sought after by tenants. The eastern view from the balcony, both for extent and loveliness, cannot be surpassed, and can never be built out; it comprises a panoramic view, including the harbour, Barcom Glen, Randwick, Coogee, extending to the ocean.

THREE VALUABLE SITES adjoining the grounds of East View House, having each about 24 feet frontage to Dowling-street, and the Darlinghurst Road, with a depth of about 118 feet.

This block of building land is at present fenced, and laid out as a garden. It has the same aspect and commanding view as the grounds of the house, and from its position, great depth, and double frontage, is peculiarly, valuable as sites for first-rate City Residences.

☞ In the present depressed market, but assured prospect of improved prices, the auctioneers have great pleasure in recommending the above lots to the notice of those on the look out for good investments in the city, and would urge an inspection of the property prior to the day of sale—as the proprietor has fully determined to sell in consequence of his early departure from Sydney.

Cards to view may be obtained, and plans inspected, at the Rooms.

THE OLD HOUSE IN PARK-STREET.—Councillors versus Calculators, or Aldermen against Auditors—
When lawyers and lawyers' clerks fall out,
You may readily guess what the fight is about.
When doctor with doctor must needs disagree,
The patient may guess what his physic will be;
But when councillors forming the proud Corporation
Of the foremost of cities of this mighty nation,
Fall out with their auditors, then you may guess
They will find themselves head over ears in a mess.
There solons had well spare themselves their ill airs,
For these gents are our servants, and never were theirs;
And Raphael and Simpson are perfectly right,
If they see something wrong, to drag it to light,
And if a smart cane, or a pliant rattan
Will aid to chastise every rude alderman,
We deal in the best that were ever in pickle,
That never break bones, but we warrant to tickle;
For we owe them a grudge, as you all know before,
For placing a dray-stand in front of our door.
